"SAFE FOR DEMOCRACY"

During the World war we were told that the prime purpose of that conflict was to make the world safe for democracy. Although German autocracy was completely defeated, the results have not been just what was anticipated. There are a few less monarchs in Europe than formerly, it is true, but there has been no great surging wave of democracy. Quite the reverse.

The biggest country in Europe in territory and population is Russia. Russia is not safe for democracy. It is now in the grip of one of the completest autocracies the world has ever known. There is a dictator in Italy who rules with an iron hand, another in Portugal, another in Greece and still another in Poland. There are times, says the National Republic, when it seems that even France will need a dictator to straighten out its tangled affairs, and nobody yet knows how much democracy there will eventually be in the new German government.

Just now the trend in Europe seems to be away from republics and constitutional monarchies and toward distatorships. Mussolini is the man of the hour and he hearkens back alternately to Julius Caesar and Napoleon Bonaparte. The World war accomplished a great many things, but it did not make the world safe for democracy. If you don't believe this just ask Mussolini, Pilsudski and the rest of the new rulers in Europe.

TOO MUCH POLITICS

It is to be deeply regretted that political activities have become so liberal a top dressing on the agricultural problems of the nation. Without any attempt to impeach the profundity of congressional thought, it must be admitted that the votes cast for and against the agricultural bills are largely influenced by political conditions.

It is unfortunate that a matter so vital reaches congress when the promise of adjournment is in the nostrils of the members and they are in a state of political doldrums. There never was a time when the call for exact impartial information on this great subject such as a real commission would report, was as great as now.

The desire of the President for some form of farm legislation is self-evident, and has not been controverted. His position is that inasmuch as hundreds of millions have been spent educating the farmers to produce a surplus, that some millions should be spent at least in endeavoring to aid him in the marketing of the same.

PRESIDENT'S ORDER LEGAL

The professional tom-tom beaters, editorial and political, who have sought to make a howdy-do and raise a clamor over President Coolidge's executive order for strengthening the enforcement of the prohibition law, have been tripped in their traces. While a committee of the solemn senate is now supposed to be making an intensive study as to the constitutionality of this measure, lawyers, large and small, agree that it stands foursquare upon the law. Stripped of its verbiage, it simply provides that in states where the people desire, and where there is no law forbidding a dual service, state officials may volunteer and may become available for a nominal compensation to assist in the enforcement of the law. The one particular advantage gained is that bootlegger and other violators who now have only to cross a municipal boundary line to escape city officials, or a state boundary to escape state officials can in instances where officials have dual power be pursued and arrested.

Democratic senators have now reached a point where they are inclined to credit the President with outwitting them. Those who know the President, of course, appreciate that such a motive is the last to influence him.
