LETTER DISCUSSES BRIDGE DIFFICULTY

thirty years or more and not only will the city clerk's books show where the money went to, but that every dollar so spent was of direct benefit to the community.

I do not doubt the good intention of the Citizens Taxpayers association, but their statement is misleading, nor has it anything to do with the bond issue for the two bridges.

As to the bridge itself, no one can blame the voter in hesitating for a moment before consenting to borrowing one hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars for two bridges, less than six hundred feet apart, it isn't that we are not in need of them or that the re-building can be put off much longer, but it is the amount involved which we would like to avoid borrowing if there is a way out of it.

This view is taken in particular, by those who realize that with the extension of our city limits, the extensive construction and necessary improvements, in street, water and sewer systems, the cost of public benefits to be shouldered by the city, will in a short time require every dollar and more than one can hope to raise by bond issues.

The bond issue has been defeated; what next? To have voted, no, on the proposition, isn't going to solve the problem confronting us, as far as the bridges are concerned the following suggestions might be worth while considering, if state aid should fall, which I am afraid will be the case.

The proposition of filling in, instead of building a bridge, may at a first glance seem out of all reason, however, when one gets more acquainted with it, it isn't so bad, especially when the difference in cost counts for so much.

A culvert 8 or 10 feet in diameter in the bottom of the ravines with retaining walls constructed after the bridges in question have been repaired with approximately fifteen thousand yards of filling for each ravine will in a short time give us a permanent forty foot roadway over the ravines, lined on either side by concrete railings, the created banks could easily be planted with trees, shrubs and evergreens to beautify and have them harmonize with the natural native growth of the sides of the ravines.

All we see of either of these bridges are the approaches. With a bridge over a river this is different or when you approach a bridge from an angle, but in our case, if you wish to see what the sides of these bridges look like, you have to hang over the railings to do it.

With several trap doors provided in the decks of the present bridges, the filling in could begin at once and even at filling at one dollar per yard, both fills could be made not exceeding thirty thousand dollars and allowing twenty thousand dollars for the balance of the cost of constructing, paving, railing, culverts, etc., etc.

The cost could still be brought down at the same time improving the landscape setting on that section of Sheridan road by lowering the street, not only south of the south and north of the north bridge, but between the bridges, the extra cost involved in lowering the street and grade down the parkways would be more than offset by the smaller amount of fill, required in the ravines, at any rate or just what the exact cost, there is no doubt but what the same, if not better results could be obtained in creating a 40 foot wide driveway over the ravine in this manner and at less than one third the cost involved by building bridges and there should be no trouble in obtaining the consent of the adjoining property owners to make the filling in possible.

The writer doesn't expect that everybody will approve of this proposition, but nevertheless, I am certain it would be practical to carry out and if we wouldn't be in too great a hurry it could be accomplished without a bond issue.

It would mean to make at once the necessary repairs which will have to be made, so as to open the bridges for traffic, put in culverts and start in to fill. The street department of our city could help much in the filling in and thousands of yards of filling could be obtained by the city in a few years when such streets as west Central avenue, Green Bay road and many others are being paved, if provisions were made to have the contractor bring all excavations from such streets for filling in these ravines.

NICK'S COLTS WIN FROM SPENCER COALS
 Highwood Plays Good Game to Win 5-0; Play Elks Next Sunday

Last Sunday Nick's Colts of Highwood defeated the Spencer Colts, 5-0. Jones, the Highwood pitcher, pitched a great game and blanked the visitors with seven strike-outs to his credit. Hohfelder, the Highwood center fielder, made an unusually fine play when he caught a ball hit far over center field.

A California church has inaugurated a smoking room for the men of the congregation, doubtless on the theory that it is better to smoke here than hereafter.

Still, so long as you can trade a bushel of corn for two gallons of gas, why worry?
