JUST PARAGRAPHS

What fun it would be if we could save from every author a little prognostication as to what he thinks his characters are going to find next. Such a word Larry Barretto, author of "Walls of Glass" wrote to a friend who thought his novel had ended too cheerfully, "Don't think the end too golden. . . Lou don't find Romance by putting out to sea, and a conscience like Sophy's don't be left at home. I imagine that she found disillusionment just over the skyline. On that account I felt very sorry for Sophy."

Theodore Dreiser has rewritten "The Financier," a book which was published in 1912, and it is being brought out by Boni and Liveright. Many people who have thought that this was Mr. Dreiser's masterpiece will be interested to see if it would allow of improvement. "Plato's American Republic" is the next book to appear in the interesting "Today and Tomorrow Series." It is said to have some interesting comments on the woman's club, the luncheon club and even prohibition.

A FINE NOVEL

"SWEEPINGS"

By Lester Cohen
Boni & Liveright

"Sweepings" by Lester Cohen, is an uncommon book written in an uncommonly fine way. It is a story of Chicago, almost an epic of the growth of the city, and more particularly of the Pardway family and its great bargain store.

Daniel and Thane Pardway planned "The Bazaar" while Chicago's ruins were still smoking, and what showed greater courage they bought the land for it, on the spot where some day the street cars would turn around to go back the other way. They were shrewd brothers; Dan, keen conservative, with the long sure vision; Thane, big, shaggy, impetuous, dealing in wheat, destined to become the "Big Black Bear" of the pit, jokingly chafing his brother that he has to sell a dozen hairpins to make a penny. They are well drawn characters, these two, each powerful in his way, each appealing, and totally different.

Daniel marries, soundly and cautiously, as he does everything, a woman who will be a good mother to his children. Thane never marries. He does not crave the responsibilities of a home, he is the king of "Good Fellahs" and his home is the nearest club or bar.

Early in the book we begin to be concerned with Daniel's children. There are four of them, and how fondly, brightly, in spite of his passion for his store, Daniel dreams of their future. The store is for them, the millions invested in real estate are for them, all the vast fabric of his life is woven for them.

And one by one of course they tear it apart. Ruthlessly, stupidly, craftily, each one according to the vice which is inherent in his nature. And the kings — King of Industry and King of "Good Fellahs", who have won success and our affection, go down to defeat.

It is a powerful, even a gripping story, it catches your emotions and twists them about with the fate of its characters as too few stories are able to do. It is a first novel, written without flourishes, interestingly, in a concise swift moving manner which seems often to be conversational.

A PLEA FOR PEACE

"LABELS"

By A. Hamilton Gibbs
Little Brown & Co.

The Gibbs family is nobly trying to contribute its annual quota to the year's fiction. A. Hamilton Gibbs, has chosen to write of the War, as was not unexpected, since his other two books have been on this subject. Mr. Gibbs writes with sincerity on the War, there is no question but that he feels strongly every word he is trying to "put across."

By using the phrase "put across" it is made plain that this is a book of a controversial nature, it is written with a purpose, a theme to expound not merely as a work of art. In the latter sense which was evidently secondary, it does not measure as high as "Soundings" which drew a delicate emotional situation excellently for the sake of drawing it, regardless of the point it wanted to prove.

In "Labels" it is hard to detach the characters from their labels, the father a selfish platitudinous profiteer, who took his profit in praise and knighthood, the mother a stupid behind the lines echoer of good English propaganda, the sister a maiden whose first bloom was frost-bitten "out-there," one brother who fought and came out with a captaincy and the D. S. O., the other who refused to fight and came out with the title of "conchy." Put these people down in one room and you have "Labels." There are several clear points of things" thrown freely about to prove that they are English, we see the two brothers as human beings. Perhaps it would really be as Mr. Gibbs intended it should, a gun fired in the more effective war to end war.

NOTED MEMORIALS IN CHICAGO PARKS

THROUGH FERGUSON FUND

Several Noted Monuments Are Made Possible By Bequest of Philanthropist; Locations

The recent unveiling of the monument erected to the memory of Father Marquette the French Jesuit priest, which occurred on July 20 at the intersection of Marshall boulevard and Twenty-fourth street calls to mind the growing list of splendid monuments erected in the parks and on the boulevards of Chicago through the operation of the Benjamin F. Ferguson fund.

Mr. Ferguson, an old and respected business man, died in Chicago on April 10, 1905. In his travels abroad during his life-time he had noted that the great cities of Europe owed much of their charm to the groups of statuary, fountains, and other sculptured embellishments which abounded in their midst. He noted the dearth of such things in Chicago and resolved to devote his wealth toward giving the city in which he made his money some of the beauty of the sculptor's art. In his will, therefore, he made a bequest to the Art Institute of Chicago to be known as the B. F. Ferguson fund, and to be entirely and exclusively expended by it under the direction of its board of trustees in the erection and maintenance of enduring statuary and monuments, in the whole or in part of stone, granite or bronze, in the parks, along the boulevards, or in other public places, within the city of Chicago, commemorating worthy men or women of America, or important events of American history.

Seven Completed
To date no less than seven important commissions have been completed. The first to be unveiled was Lorado Taft's "Fountain of the Great Lakes" on the south terrace of the Art Institute, which was dedicated September 9, 1913. The next was the "Statue of the Republic" by Daniel Chester French which was dedicated May 11, 1918. It is in Jackson Park. The third was the Alexander Hamilton monument, a bronze figure by Bela Pratt, erected in a section of the wall along the Illinois Central railroad, just north of the Art Institute, between Monroe and Madison streets. This was unveiled September 28, 1918. Then followed almost immediately the dedication of the Illinois Centennial monument in Logan Square, and unveiled October 13, 1918. Evelyn B. Loneman was the sculptor. The beautiful Eugene Field monument, illustrating the charming story of "Winken, Blinken and Nod," a bronze group by Edward McCartan, followed four years later and was dedicated on October 9, 1922, in Lincoln Park. Lorado Taft's famous "Fountain of Time" a colossal group designed for the Midway Plaisance, was finished on November 15, 1922. "The Spirit of Music," a memorial figure dedicated to the memory of Theodore Thomas, by Albin Polasek, was completed and dedicated April 24, 1924. It is in Grant Park, opposite Orchestra hall.

Is Latest
The Marquette monument is the latest to be finished, and presented to the West Park board, for the people of Chicago. Other work in hand consists of sculptural ornamentations for the bridge houses at the south approach to the Michigan avenue bridge, Henry Hering being the sculptor. The bridge houses at the north end of the bridge will also be decorated by James Earle Frazer, the cost of which will be met by William Wrigley, Jr.

PLANNING COURSE IN REAL ESTATE

North Shore Board Arranges It; Conveyance Is Special Subject

The North Shore Real Estate board has arranged a course in real estate conveyance, to be held at Community house, Winnetka, beginning Monday evening, October 18.

The course will comprise twenty-lessons. The sessions will be held each Monday evening, beginning at 7:30 o'clock. Harold L. Reeve, of the firm of Reeve and Haywood, Chicago, will be the instructor. It will be for the layman as well as the real estate man.

The entire course will be handled by the problem method of instruction. Problems based upon the ordinary situations encountered in selling and leasing and also in loaning money on real estate, are worked out by the class in detail.

It is not necessary to become a member of the North Shore Real Estate board to take this course. The cost will be very reasonable, and those interested in the opportunity which is being brought to this community to learn more of the details of real estate conveyancing in all its various angles, are requested to confer with F. Coleman Burroughs, 1157 Wilmette avenue, Wilmette.

According to H. D. Hill, of the real estate firm of Hill and Stone, and who is president of the North Shore Real Estate board, applications for enrollment for the course are coming in very rapidly and the limit which has been placed as to the size of the class, will soon be reached.

CORN PAINT NEW ILLINOIS PRODUCT

DESCRIBED IN BULLETIN

Chamber of Commerce Sends Out Information of Latest In This Line; Development Expected

Within the next few years it is probable that we will be painting our houses and barns with a corn "paint" — even as we are now finishing our motor cars and our fine furniture, according to a bulletin just issued by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce which calls attention to this new outlet for corn.

"An entirely new and highly decorative finish, unusually hard and having rare lasting qualities, which dries quickly and retains its lustre, made from nitro-cellulose—nitrated cotton linters—and butyl alcohol, distilled from corn, has recently attained national prominence and favor," says the bulletin. It explains:

How Developed
"Butyl alcohol is produced by developing a micro-organism, known as the B-y bug, in corn mash. This alcohol, highly poisonous, was produced in large quantities during the World war as a by-product in the manufacture of acetone, used in high explosives. Since the war this "corn paint" has been used extensively by 34 automotive manufacturers on 2,500,000 automobiles and by 70 furniture manufacturers, as well as by the Frisco and other railroads as a finish in place of paints, varnishes and enamels. It is now estimated that more corn is being used in the manufacture of this comparatively new commercial product than is exported.

Is a Solvent
"Butyl alcohol is the solvent which the chemists developed for nitro-cellulose. Recently, however, chemical research has produced a corn paint which can be used in the home. The product previously used on automobiles and furniture had to be sprayed on with an air gun. This new product can be brushed onto any wood or metal surface and will produce the same Duco finish in the home which is so widely used in industry. Scientists see in the development of this new finish a market for millions of bushels of corn yearly while farmers in the corn belt view it as an agricultural blessing. One of the largest plants making butyl alcohol is in Peoria, Illinois, the other is in Terre Haute, Indiana."

An Odd Dish

R. M. sends us the story of a young bride who asked her husband to copy off a radio recipe she wanted. He did his best, but got two stations at once, one of which was broadcasting the morning exercises and the other the recipe. This is what he took down:

"Hands on hips place one cup of flour on the shoulders, raise knees and depress toes and mix thoroughly in one-half cup of milk. Repeat six times. Inhale quickly, one-half teaspoonful of baking powder, lower the legs and mash two hard-boiled eggs in a sieve. Exhale, breathe naturally and sift into a bowl.

"Attention! Lie flat on the floor and roll the white of an egg backward and forward until it comes to a boil. In ten minutes remove from the fire and rub smartly with a rough towel. Breathe naturally, dress in warm flannels and serve with fish soup."

The people are urged to get out and vote to save the country, but a considerable number could do something toward that end by staying at home.
