Deerfield School Parent-Teacher Association

Such a large number of parents were attracted by the operetta, coached by Mrs. Woods, the music teacher of the Deerfield school, for the December meeting of the Deerfield Parent-Teacher association that it was necessary to repeat it twice in succession. On account of the failure of the contractor to have the new addition to the school finished within the specified time the audience gathered in the third grade room, which is the largest of the eight now in use. Over a hundred parents sat, or stood around the walls, and as many waited patiently in the corridors for an opportunity to see their children take part in the beautiful and attractive sketch which took an hour to perform.

Preceding the operetta, pupils of the first grade gave a rhythm drill. The characters in the operetta were all in costume. Edgeley Todd played the entire accompaniments for the songs in an accomplished manner. Some of the pupils whose work was also outstanding was C. W. Peterson as Santa Claus, who did some excellent solo work, as did Mary Hood and Gertrude Johnson who represented popcorn. Bobbie Patterson wore a beautiful yellow clown costume and revealed a sweet, clear, soprano voice. Katherine Hoffman was an attractive doll. Dorothy Myers, as one of the candles, showed grace in action. The candles were green or red cheesecloth costumes, and had yellow caps, the paper twisted to represent a wick. Edwin Wood was a cute teddy bear.

The group songs were melodious and showed faithful training and practice. The complete cast of the operetta was as follows:

FAMOUS SCULPTOR VISITS CHICAGO

James Earle Frazer, Who Made "The End of the Trail" at Institute

The sculptor who made the remarkable statue entitled "The End of the Trail," James Earle Frazer, was a visitor in the Art Institute last week, stopping for a few hours en route to Waupun, Wis., where a statue of the sorrowful figure of the Indian seated on his drooping pony, will be unveiled. "The End of the Trail" tells the story of the vanishing Indian race as a book could tell it. Mr. Frazer also modelled the fascinating mask of the "Young Girl" now in the Art Institute, which is pronounced as fine a piece of work as has been done recently by an American sculptor. Mr. Frazer is a native of Winona, Minn., and a former student in the Art Institute Art school.

GOOD DEED DAILY IS GOAL OF ORPHANAGE

Clothing and feeding for orphan children is not the only service which the Near East Relief has been doing for the past year in its great orphanage schools. The teaching which it gives to its 35,000 orphan wards includes the admonition to "do one good deed a day," and the habit thus ingrained in the children will have a wide effect on the future of the Levant.

Nailed on the wall of one of the orphanages here, down low so that the tiniest orphan can reach it, is a box with a slot like a letter box. Into this narrow opening each day are slipped scraps of paper on which the children record their daily good deed. At the close of one day, the following were a few of the simple sentences which told how the children were learning to make practical application of the Golden Rule:

"Two children were thirsty; I gave them water."
"A boy was carrying a heavy pail full of water; I helped him."
"The end of a boy's knife was bent; I fixed it on the anvil, and sharpened it on the grind-stone. He said 'Thank you,' and I said 'Don't mention it.'"
"Two kindergarten children could not carry their beds; I helped them."
"The wind scattered a boy's papers; I helped him gather them up."
"From my share I gave three figs to a kindergarten child."
"A boy wished to make a kite but had no paper; I gave mine."
"Two boys were quarreling; I stopped them."

Each day the letter contains hundreds of such messages, telling of the simple way in which sunny hours are being recorded by these orphan waifs.

QUAINT OLD MAPS INTERESTING STUDY

Just now the collection and study of quaint old maps has become something of a fad. A case containing some old volumes, published in England, in 1579, containing a number of these quaint old maps, the gift of Mrs. E. Crane Chadbourne, has just been installed in the print galleries of the Art Institute. In showing in color on a large scale some of the counties in England the hills are designated by drawings of hills and the forests by groups of trees. Other books in the case contain maps of America as it was known in 1656, published in France; also a book of alphabets and a book illustrating the

One of the most beautiful weddings in the Winnetka Congregational church was that of Emily Carol Scott whose marriage to Frank Langdon Hubbard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Hubbard of Grosse Pointe, Mich., took place last Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

The service was read by the Rev. James Austin Richards before the illy banked altar and walls of southern smile through which only the stained glass window above the music loft was visible. The white robed choir of St. Augustine's Episcopal church, with hymnals encased in scarlet leather, sang the wedding march and St. Anselm's wedding song, "O Love Divine and Golden."

The entire church edifice was lighted only by clusters of three tall cathedral candles in tall wrought iron holders placed at each pew and in each window, with two larger candelabra at either side of the altar.

The bride was attired in shimmering cream chiffon velvet, soft and lustrous with old rose point lace that has been in the family for many years a conventional court train, and veil of tulle. Gardenias and valley lilies comprised her bouquet.

The gowns of the attendants, Miss Isabel Scott, maid of honor, Mrs. Donald Welles, matron of honor, and the five maids, Miss Edith Fairbanks, Miss Louise Tyler, Miss Joan Stuart, Miss Laura Towne of Washington, and Miss Romaine Warren of Detroit, were of flame-color taffeta fashioned with bouffant skirts short in front, long in back. MISS MARTHA IRWIN DIES AT HER HOME

Funeral Service Wednesday at Graceland Chapel; Much Loved Woman

Miss Martha A. Irwin died Monday, Dec. 13, at her residence, 313 Maple avenue, Highland Park.

Beloved sister of Elizabeth C. Irwin, John B. Irwin, and Mrs. Hugh R. Ritchie.

Miss Irwin was loved by all who knew her and it was her greatest pleasure to make the home beautiful and happy. Her charities were many and much appreciated.

Miss Irwin was a woman of great ability, untiring energy and self-sacrificing devotion to any cause which appealed to her generous heart. However it was in her home where her great heart found its most perfect expression.

Miss Irwin has lived in Highland Park sixteen years and formerly resided on Dearborn Parkway, Chicago, for twenty-five years.

The funeral service was held at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Graceland chapel, the Rev. Frank Pitt officiating and interment was in Graceland cemetery.

Any funny noise you may hear is not Jimmy Cox weeping because Senator Ferguson will not be elected.
