Formal Opening of Library
Saturday, Jan. 1, the Public Library had its formal opening. A large crowd was in attendance and were much delighted with the library. The room was decorated with ferns which were kindly loaned by Mrs. Kottasch. While the library was not opened for official business, about fifty people enrolled during the day. The library will be open for business starting Wednesday, January 5, and every Wednesday and Saturday thereafter, the hours will be from 2 to 5 in the afternoon and from 7 to 9 in the evening. The rules of our library are practically identical with those of the Chicago, Evanston, and Highland Park public libraries. Every person who wants to take a book home will have to have a card and have this card signed by a guarantor. The exercises closed by a short address by Mr. Geary to the people and he presented the library to Mayor James J. Hood as representing the people of Deerfield. Mr. Hood made an address of thanks and accepted the library in the name of the people of Deerfield. Reverend Piepenbrok made an address congratulating the people of Deerfield on having such a wonderful library.
