Rediscovering ILLINOIS
by LESTER COLEY
GLASSER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Fifty-eight towns and cities in Illinois, outside of Chicago, report 116 new industries established in 1926. These new industries, according to the figures, gave employment to 5,753 male workers and 1,542 female workers.

The estimated investment in these new industries is put at $37,950,000 and the new payroll coming to Illinois as a result of them is given as $8,927,500 a year. These figures are from a survey just completed by the industrial development committee of the Illinois Chamber of Commerce.

Industrial Expansion
Thirty-four towns and cities in Illinois, outside of Chicago, report 109 industrial expansion in 1926. These expansions have given employment in the year to 6,366 male and 812 female workers, according to the figures.

It is estimated that a total of $27,276,600 has been spent in these plant additions and developments and that the added payroll, as a result, will be approximately $6,773,000. Reports from seventy towns and cities figured in the above, some of them showing both new industries and expansions while others have acquired new industries with no expansions or vice-versa.

More Activity
The report above shows much more activity in Illinois in 1926 than in 1925 when only thirty-seven towns and cities reported new industries or expansions. In 1925 these thirty-seven towns and cities reported sixty-three new industries established and 128 expansions.

It was estimated that in 1925 employment was given to 4,364 males and 1,462 females by the new industries. Expansions were larger in 1925 in point of employment given as it was estimated that in 1925 there were 11,615 male and 2,007 female workers put to work. Capital investment in additions, however, was put at only $10,232,700.

Waukegan and Vicinity
Waukegan and North Chicago, industrially considered as one city, report ten new industries established in 1926 with fourteen expansions. New industries in Waukegan-North Chicago gave employment to 1,079 males and 75 females; investment $3,097,000; payroll $1,919,000. Expansions in Waukegan and North Chicago gave work to 892 males and 150 females. These expansions called for an added investment of $1,548,000 with an annual increase in payroll of $1,711,000.

South Chicago also reports large activities and while there are fewer new industries and fewer expansions the totals in dollars invested are larger. The survey shows that $25,450,000 was put into new industries in South Chicago in the year and $6,200,000 in expansions. South Chicago's new industries gave employment to 450 male and 10 female workers. The expansions gave employment to about 1,800 male workers.

Freeport shows four new industries, 275 male and 150 female workers; investment, $840,000; payroll $792,000. Approximate investment in expansion in Freeport is put at $867,000 with added payroll of $115,000.

Peoria reports four new industries with an investment of $150,000 and employment for 55. Six industries in Peoria show an investment of $5,200,000 in expansions in the year, and employment for about 400 male and 50 female workers.

Sterling and Rock Falls which are considered as one city, report three new industries and thirteen expansions. These new industries gave work to 65 males and 10 females with a payroll of $96,000 and investment of $1,020,000. The thirteen expansions check in with increased capital investment of $1,093,000 and payroll of $482,000, employment being given as a result of the expansions to 290 males and 36 females.

Galesburg is also up among the leaders in both new industrial development and expansion. Galesburg shows for the year four new industries; investment, $205,000; payroll, $85,000; employment, 30 males and 41 females. Galesburg shows $200,000 in industrial expansions with added payroll of $80,000; added employment for fifty persons.

Effingham shows four new industries started in the year with an investment of $560,000 and a payroll of $600,000. These plants give employment to 350 men and 300 women. Effingham shows no expansions during the year. The situation in Effingham is somewhat remarkable as practically all of its industries, at the outset, of 1926, were old ones.

Effingham's Effort
It can be said, with much truth, that Effingham's awakening has been due to organized effort within the city. Effingham, which for years had little industrial growth or expansion, suddenly decided to develop itself in an organized way and the story speaks for itself.

Macomb is also well up among the leaders reporting four new industries in the year and two expansions. With an investment of only $54,500 in new industries, Macomb, however, shows an added payroll of $126,500 going to 66 workers, 21 male and 45 female. Macomb's two expansions gave work to 105 men. The added investment is put at $125,000 and the annual payroll increase at $120,000.

Decatur stands third in capital invested in expansions of $4,025,000 with an increased payroll of $240,000. Decatur's three new industries give employment to 90 males and 20 females with an annual payroll of $150,000. Capital investment in new enterprises in the year in Decatur is put at $275,000.

Aurora Ranks Well.
Aurora also ranks well among the Illinois cities which have succeeded in making real advances industrially in the year. Aurora reports four new industries; investment, $210,000; payroll, $60,000; employment given, 60 males and 82 females. Expansions in Aurora industries reveal an added investment of $2,049,800 with an increased payroll of $358,700. These expanding industries gave employment to 516 males and 65 females in the year.

Summing up the findings of the survey it is pointed out that twenty-two towns and cities in Illinois report more than one new industry and twenty-one report more than one expansion.

COMPULSORY AUTO INSURANCE SCORED

NOT CURE FOR ACCIDENTS

Chicago Motor Club Bulleting Points Out Misconception of This Proposal; Reasons

"Compulsory insurance for motor vehicle drivers is a much talked of regulation, and yet with all the discussion it is generally misunderstood, says a bulletin issued by the Accident Prevention department of the Chicago Motor club. The average man's idea of a compulsory insurance law is that such a law will protect him against the property damage caused by another driver. Property damage, however, has never been considered in any of the laws that have been presented to the various legislatures, Massachusetts, for instance has a compulsory insurance law in effect now, but property damage has no place in this law.

Another Misconception
"Another misconception of the compulsory insurance law is that injured persons or the families of the persons killed in automobile accidents will be able to collect damages under all circumstances. The fact is that damages could be collected only after it has been established in court that the driver is liable under the law for the damages sustained.

"Safety workers who favor compulsory insurance do so on a theory that such a regulation will reduce accidents. One of the most able proponents of state compulsory insurance, Judge Robert S. Marx, says, "The only way by which the increasing tide of automobile accidents can be checked and brought under scientific control is to grant a remedy to those who are injured and to the dependents of the dead, and to compel those who do the damage to human life to compensate those who are damaged. In defending his pet theory, Judge Marx depreciates the driver's license law, uniform highway laws, and more stringent enforcement of scientific measures asserting that 'none of these proposals is sufficiently fundamental to meet the accident crisis.' Compulsory insurance is Judge Marx's remedy.

Falacy of Argument
"This argument is as cogent as the argument of the man who would assert that fire prevention work is all very well but the way to prevent fires is to provide for state fire insurance as a substitute for fire departments.

"The fact of the matter is that the mere carrying of insurance does not tend to make the driver more careful. It does not follow that because a man is relieved of civil responsibility for his negligent acts to the extent that his legal liability has been assumed in part by an insurance company that, consequently, he will be more careful. On the other hand, is it not more logical to assume that a certain percentage of drivers will feel that with assured protection, constant care is not so necessary? The fear of losing car, home, and savings is removed. The insurance company must do all the worrying. How can such an attitude lead to a reduction in accidents?"

HIBBARD MEMORIAL FORMALLY DEDICATED

Impressive Ceremony Marks Unveiling of Tablet in Hibbard School

The tablet given by the Hibbard family of Winnetka, in memory of William Gold Hibbard, was unveiled and dedicated at an impressive ceremony in the assembly hall of the Hibbard school, 3244 Ainslee avenue, Chicago, recently, under the direction of the Chicago Public School Art society. William Gold Hibbard IV unveiled the tablet, while William Gold Hibbard III of 942 Pine street, Winnetka, presented the tablet to the Public School Art society. Mrs. Augustus Carpenter accepted the tablet in the name of the society, and William McCAndrew, superintendent of school in Chicago, accepted it for the Chicago schools.
