During the baseball season many baseball clubs travel regularly on the North Shore Line, just as football teams, bowling teams and other athletic organizations use the North Shore Line during the periods when they are active. In a letter to the North Shore Line, James B. Hatton, Manager of the Logan Square Baseball Club, Chicago, says: "The courtesies and service extended myself and the ball club are very commendable and I do not think it right to let them pass by without letting you know my sentiments. There is no question in my mind that if this class of service is rendered to all patrons, your business will increase tremendously."

Long favored as a site for large estates—now fast becoming a great new community of homes.

The Beautiful Skokie Valley

BECAUSE of its natural splendor, the Skokie Valley has long been the chosen site for scores of fine estates. Most people, however, could not heretofore consider locating there; transportation was too distant.

Competent landscaping of new communities; sensible building restrictions; accessibility of numerous golf courses and forest preserves—these and other factors are attracting discriminating home-seekers to the Skokie Valley. Modern conveniences are available.

This has been changed since the North Shore Line opened its Skokie Valley Route and inaugurated high-speed electrically-operated service. Since then the Skokie Valley has been undergoing a transformation. It is taking its logical place as "the newer North Shore."

To those desiring more freedom, more space—and to those wishing to locate near friends or relatives in older sections of the North Shore—there is one logical place to look. That place is along the Skokie Valley.
