REP. WEISS DIES AT HOME IN WAUKEGAN

The condition was brought about by an injury to the leg suffered by Mr. Weiss after the Dempsey-Tunney fight in Chicago on the evening of September 22. Mr. Weiss, while leaving Soldiers Field made a misstep in the dark and the jar to his leg resulted in the injury which brought about his death. This is according to the diagnosis of his case by Dr. Osgood.

The last words of the deceased were spoken to his wife, who was at his bedside at the moment that he seemed to rally after a short period of coma, into which he had passed while talking with Congressman Rathbone.

"I must have fallen to sleep while talking with the congressman," Mr. Weiss declared. A moment later he was dead.

Born in Chicago
Born in Chicago on June 20, 1875, he received his early education in the public schools of that city. He later moved to a farm on the Milford road near Waukegan with his parents where he resided for some years before settling in Waukegan. For a time he was employed in the office of the treasurer of Cook county as a teller. He also launched upon his political career in that period, having been elected to the office which he held for 10 years.

During the same period he began the study of law. He was admitted to the state bar in 1897. A year later he was united in marriage in Waukegan.

His career as a lawyer met with more or less general success until 1916 when his ability was recognized by Attorney General Brundage, who appointed him as an assistant attorney general. He held that important post until 1920 when he resigned to run for election to the house of representatives. He was serving out his fourth term in the house at the time of his death.

Prominent Legislator
Besides holding the chairmanship of the committee on education in the house at his death he was a member of several important committees and for a time served as temporary speaker of the house. One of his souvenirs of his years of service was a gavel used by him during that period.

One of the more important bills which he fostered and succeeded in having passed was that which increased the speed limit of automobiles on Illinois roads from 25 to 35 miles an hour. He was also working on a number of important projects of educational interest in the state at the time of his death and likewise was fathering a movement to have Camp Logan converted into a state park. He was ever regarded as the champion for measures which had the welfare of the masses at heart.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Josephine Weiss, he is survived by one daughter, Miss Frances Weiss, an instructor in the Waukegan Township high school.

Funeral Thursday
Funeral services were held from the Christ Episcopal church, Waukegan, at two o'clock Thursday afternoon. The services were open to the public. Interment was in Pine View cemetery.

The Lake County Bar association met in the circuit court room at 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning to pay tribute to the memory of Mr. Weiss. Many men of prominence in the political and legal life of the state were present at the funeral.
