Using the new found confidence as a basis, he proceeds to show his clients that increasing success follows as a matter of habit.

"There is nothing in the old-fashioned gritting of teeth and saying: 'I will'," says Dr. Mitchell. "And what some big executives consider as pep tolks are usually ineffective. Pep is something the ast be manufactured by oneself."

Continual cautioning of children by parents and school tasks beyond the abilities of young pupils instill the sense of fear of failure in them that remains throughout their lives, adds the scientist. Re-education, he says, is the only method of freeing the vast majority of human beings from such artificial handicaps.
