

GARRICK PLAYERS TO PRESENT FIVE PLAYS

First Is Freshman Performance To Be Given Nov. 2; Others Under Way

The Garrick Players of Lake Forest college have five plays scheduled for presentation between now and the Christmas holidays. "One of the Family," the first freshman play will be given Wednesday evening, Nov. 2. The cast is composed entirely of new students and the play is under the direction of John F. Baird of Prof. Leverton's staff.

A second freshman play, "In Love with Love," is now in rehearsal under the direction of Miss Margery Thomas, instructor in interpretative reading. The date for its presentation will be announced later.

As a diversion from the regular custom there will be no dance the night of Homecoming, Nov. 19, and instead the Garrick Players will present Austin Strong's "Seventh Heaven."

November 29 and 30 will be marked by two performances of "Square Crooks" under the auspices of the American Legion (but produced of course by the Garrick Players). Laurence Palmer will be the featured player in the leading role.

Just before the Christmas holidays the Players will revive Channing Pollock's "The Fool," with Robert Wood in the title-part which he created here in June 1926.

George Bernard Shaw's "Candida" has been postponed to a later date until Mr. Wood shall have recovered completely from a recent tonsil operation.

REMEMBERING NAMES NOT A GIFT, HE SAYS

Man Who Can Call 10,000 Persons by Name Says It is Hard Work

Louis C. Dorn, reception clerk at the White Motor Truck plant in Cleveland, O., remembers 10,000 persons by name but it is work, not a gift that enables him to do so, he declares.

While being interviewed recently for the American Magazine, he stopped to recall the name of an arrival who he had not seen in twenty-five years. He also recalled the names of many visitors whom he had not seen in five years, as well as the names of their firms. He has been displaying this remarkable talent with the White company for fourteen years. Dorn is now 53.

"Anyone can have a good memory if he is willing to train it," said Dorn.

"I trained mine by systematic hard work. I started working in a shoe store and found how much more desirable it was to know returning customers, so I bought a ledger and entered in it the name of every new customer I served, along with striking peculiarities of habit or dress. I noted one man's watch chain and six months later found I was able to recall his name from that association. Thereafter I tried to remember the peculiarities of people and by associating the peculiarity with the name, the moment I detected it again I was given a clue to the name and the name in turn, suggested facts previously set down in my book."

"It was hard at first, but I kept on for seventeen years and found that day by day I was referring less and less to my book. Now I keep no records other than purely mental ones. I find that men who have no distinguishing marks, either physical or mental, do not escape. That very rare fact identifies them."

SPENDS A MILLION AND IS NOT SORRY

Noted Advertising Man Tells in Magazine Article How It Was Done

William C. Freeman, but a few years ago one of the foremost newspaper advertising men in America and who has made more than one million dollars, hasn't a cent today.

"While it is embarrassing, even humiliating to confess to an outstanding fault that has made a good deal of a mess of my life," he says, writing in the American Magazine, "I have decided to make a confession for the good it may do."

Mr. Freeman relates how, as a young school teacher, he married and found his family obliged to undergo hardships of poverty until he discovered in Bridgeton, N. J., that he could make money in the advertising field. From that time he went to bigger and bigger jobs, including the advertising management of the New York Journal for William Randolph Hearst and the New York Mail, once a Frank B. Munsey paper. Commissions and salaries poured in upon him, but lavish living and injudicious loans made these huge sums inadequate.

"I do not regret," he says, "that I spent ninety per cent of the money I made. To wish that back would make me feel that I would have denied my family and others too much happiness. But if I had the ten per cent that I could have saved easily, I would really feel that I was truly rich."

MUCH OPPOSITION TO MARINE SUBSIDY

Maritime Association of New York Urges Against Hasty Action on Plan

Senator Wesley Jones of Washington is a sober, serious thinker, but his latest suggestion that the American treasury continue supporting an American merchant marine is not producing the exact amount of enthusiasm which he expected. It may be that the senator, whose state is proud of its frontage on salt water, has been carried away by the tang of the air from the Pacific ocean and the sight of the vessels of the East Indian and China trade which make through Washington ports.

The Maritime Association of the Port of New York is the latest to break a lance on the senator's suggestion that we float a government-owned navy out of the United States treasury funds. In a letter to the senator it recites that there are 10,000,000 tons of shipping under private flags and only 3,000,000 tons under government ownership and operation; but that while the privately owned ships have made a profit at least, that in eight years the government has spent three quarters of a billion dollars on the 1,500 government-owned ships. It suggests that the government first of all appoint a board of experts to make an examination of the entire situation and it virtually agrees to abide by the conclusions which such a board of experts may reach.

THE HARVEST
The harvest month is here—the most colorful of the year. Nature's golden fruit and grain—radiant in their dress of ripeness—have been gathered. The leaves on the sturdy oaks are tinted with the most beautiful colors on Jack Frost's palette. And here and there, wisps of smoke climb lazily skyward from cottage chimneys as though signaling us to come and share the warmth and hospitality within.

OWNERSHIP
THE first prehistoric man to become a manufacturer owned his own tools—rough instruments of flint made with his own hands.
As industry developed and crude tools gave way to more costly and more complex machinery, men separated themselves into groups—owners of tools and users of tools. Out of this separation grew industrial problems, and in their solution, the trend has been toward a wider ownership of the tools of industry by those who use them.
Industry's most useful tool in America, the telephone, is owned by the public. Bell System securities are distributed among 800,000 investors. The stock of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company is held by more than 420,000 owners, and no individual owns as much as 1%. In this nationwide ownership of nationwide facilities, the tool owner and tool user are identical.
