DEERFIELD GRAMMAR SCHOOL

Mildred Roll met with a peculiar accident at recess Thursday afternoon. The football had become lodged in a tree and the boys were trying to dislodge it by throwing sticks and stones at it. Mildred was watching the activities from a distance. Suddenly a rock that had missed the football came out of the sky and struck her squarely between the eyes. She dropped as though she were dead. The rock cut her forehead open in a rather small but deep cut and while boy scouts and friends were getting her into the school house, she managed to get her own hands and clothing pretty well covered with blood. As soon as the principal was notified of the accident, he dispersed the group of children that were crowding around her and then carried her up into his office. There by the use of cold cloths, the flow of blood was stopped and she was brought back to consciousness. After she was somewhat quieted the principal took her home in his car. She returned to school Friday afternoon, seemingly none the worse for the accident.

The Toy Shop in Grade 1B was a project of much interest to pupils and visitors throughout the week. The pupils had arranged a canopy over a portion of their sand table and filled the space beneath with various toys brought from home.

Members of the eighth grade under the supervision of the principal were busy Wednesday planting Iris and tulips around and in the shrubbery in front of the school building. Through the efforts of the members of the Garden club, the Iris were donated by Mr. B. H. Kress and the tulip bulbs by Mr. Pottinger.

ed a "study center" at Libertyville high school Saturday, Oct. 29. Visitors' day at Deerfield grammar school, Friday, Nov. 4, was a complete success. The first visitor, Olive Frantz, came very shortly after nine o'clock, and from that time until 3:30 a more or less steady stream of visitors were either coming or going. A total of 52 visitors visited the various rooms.

Who's Who In Deerfield Grammar School

Irene Evenson, fifth grade teacher. Home, Larsen, Wis. Education, Neenah high school, Neenah, Wis., 1923; Oshkosh State Teachers College, Oshkosh, Wis., 1923-25; summer school there 1925. Experience, two years, Half Day school, Prairie View, Ill., 1925-27.

The W. J. Burns Detective agency will pay a reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of any person guilty of theft, burglary, malicious mischief, destruction of property, or other crimes affecting the Deerfield grammar school or property belonging to the Deerfield grammar school. Chief of Police, Henry Peterson, installed the notification of this protection on the central west door of the school building, Thursday, October 20.

On Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays, the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades use the library for a music room. Most of the children of these grades are at the age when their voice is changing and they need the assistance of a piano in their singing.

The music and art director has started two bands or orchestras in the two first grades. The first grade "B's" are called "The Deerfield Toy Band" and the first grade "A's" are called "The Teeny Weeny Band." The instruments used by these little folks are blocks of wood for chapples, donated by Mr. R. B. Patterson, and horseshoes for triangles. The horseshoes were donated by the Highland Park blacksmith. The music and art director says she can very handily use bells, drums, whistles, horns and cymballs that any parents care to donate or lend to these rudimentary bands.

SOUTH DAKOTA CHURCH HAS UNIQUE HISTORY

Built and Paid for by Product of Quarter Section on Which It Stands

Farmers scattered throughout the townless district of Brown County, South Dakota, held their harvest-home festival this month in a cross roads church which a stony quarter-section, stretching away behind it has completely paid for. From this time it will pay the preacher's salary and most of the other operating expenses of the church community.

"The church was founded in the eighties," said Frank Faulk, one of the original trustees, telling Farm & Fireside of the farm church experiment. "At that time there was no cash in the community with which to build the church, but the homesteaders took up a quarter-section of farmland in addition to the church site. For years the land did not produce sufficient income to carry out the original plans but as farming methods grew more modern and more people arrived, a good tenant was found for the farm and returns began to flow into the church."

"The church's interests are taken care of by a board of trustees. The land is annually producing more wheat and corn and oats. There is no mortgage on which to pay interest and since the farm belongs to the church there are no taxes. Half of the income goes directly into the church treasury as its share and the end of its indebtedness was marked at the festival this year."

THE SLANDERED WIFE

"My wife's as virtuous as a cloud-bank full o' angels," sez ol' Lem Lentil, "but she's got the 'gimmies' and that's why I call her a wantin' woman."—Farm & Fireside.

STAR FOOTBALL MEN OFTEN PROFESSIONALS

Play Under Assumed Names, Says Magazine Writer; Colleges Wink at Practice

Respect for the amateur law of the colleges is weakened by the conviction among players, alumni, and coaches that the faculties are insincere. The crime here also is in getting caught.

A few years ago many star football men from Illinois and Notre Dame were caught playing under assumed names in a small town in Illinois. Most of them had finished their gridiron careers at the universities and took advantage of what they considered a safe opportunity to earn one hundred dollars each. The newspaper headlines told of "confessions" in the same spirit as they would have shouted of confessions from bank robbers. The campus heroes were reduced to the position of ingrates by the properly shocked college authorities.

One of these boys used his money to buy an overcoat for himself and shoes for his best pal, who also happened to be captain of the college baseball team. The "ingrate" is now a movie actor and his pal a successful lawyer and assemblyman. Another of the disgraced band was a three-sport man and also a captain. Before playing for money he was hungry occasionally and walked miles to the campus for lack of a five-cent fare. He has since played professional football and baseball and has used the money to study medicine.

The players had a code of their own. It was my unpleasant duty as a college reporter to broadcast the "confession" from one of my best friends. He told me at the time, in confidence:

"If I told the name of every fellow I played baseball against last summer under an assumed name, there would be few stars left to start the football season next year in the Big Ten."

Two of those he named to me later made Walter Camp's All-American eleven. They did not happen to be caught.
