

DEERFIELD TO PLAY NEW TRIER SATURDAY

GAME AT INDIAN HILL

Blue and White Defeats Evanston Last Week, 12 to 0, in Fast Battle; Details in Brief

Saturday's conflict at New Trier this week marks the last game to be played away from home by the Deerfield-Shields football team this season, and precedes the last game of the year, which is to be played with Davenport, Iowa. The game will be called at 2:30, at New Trier's athletic field.

Has Good Team

New Trier is putting up a team this year that is stronger than any New Trier team met by Deerfield for some time. So far this season they have experienced only one setback, which was at the hands of Waukegan. In this game they made another touchdown, which was disallowed. The team is heavy, but is also fast.

For the past five years New Trier has fallen before the Deerfield attack, and during this time have succeeded in scoring only seven points against Deerfield. This was two years ago.

Defeat Evanston

For the first time since 1921 Deerfield's grid team defeated Evanston Saturday to the tune of a 12-0 score. The game was so hard-fought and the two teams so evenly matched, that the outcome could not be determined until the fourth quarter, when Deerfield's second touchdown "put the game on ice."

No scoring was done in the first half, but Deerfield had the ball near its goal for most of the time. The Evanston line twice prevented them from scoring, however.

Both teams were pretty evenly matched on defensive gaining, each one scoring four first downs. Evanston depended on end runs, line plunges to gain yardage rather than passes, of which few were tried and only one was completed, for 8 yards, Mellin to Mendelious. Another of their passes was intercepted by "Red" Colclasure. Deerfield attempted eight passes and completed only one. This was from Dickinson to Dick Hammond, and was good for twelve yards.

The wind was a decided factor in the game when it came to punting. Long punts were easily gotten off when with the wind, but short punts ruled when sent out against the wind. Dickinson's punts, several of which were over fifty yards, were a big factor in Deerfield's victory.

BIG GAME AND DANCE FOR H. S. HOME-COMING

Davenport to Play Local School Team Nov. 19; Dancing Held in Evening

Besides the game with Davenport on the annual Deerfield-Shields Homecoming day, November 19, there will also be the dance sponsored by the Alumni association. This will be from nine to twelve in the boys gym, and will be open to all alumni and students of Deerfield-Shields.

There will be no dinner this fall, but one is contemplated for next spring. The music for the dance will be furnished by the Bluebird orchestra.

The officers who are planning this affair are James Anderson III, '22, president; Elizabeth Baker '23, vice-president; Lydia Garling '23, secretary; and Martin Hart '14, treasurer. Mr. Anderson has charge of the publicity for the dance, and Miss Baker will supervise the matters of orchestra and decorations. Miss Garling will plan the refreshments and take care of the check room, while Mr. Hart is to manage the sale of tickets.

REASON GIVEN FOR SAGGING OF WIRES

In winter a telephone wire contracts; in summer it expands. 130-foot span length of copper wire such as is ordinarily used in long distance circuits contracts approximately one and a half inches in a temperature change of from 100 degrees above zero to ten degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. The contraction increases the tension on the wire and causes its shortening, but there is only about one-half inch difference in length after the change has been taken place. The change in sag, however, is more extreme. A wire having a specification sag of 16 inches at 100 degrees above zero will have a sag of only five inches when the thermometer registers ten degrees below zero, Fahrenheit.

HARBAUGH LUMBER CO. WINS SUIT IN COURT

Given Judgment for $5,394 in Case Which Has Been Long in Litigation

Circuit Judge Claire C. Edwards last week entered judgment in a case which has been in the Circuit court for the past few years, ruling that the sum of $5,394.61 be paid to the Charles Harbaugh Lumber company of Highland Park by Benjamin Stickels, Harriet E. Stanton and William J. Stratton, all of Ingleside.

Attorney E. M. Runyard, who with Attorney R. W. Churchill represented Stickels, Stratton, and Mrs. Stanton, said in all probability the matter would be taken to the Appellate court on a writ of error. He was allowed 15 days to file a bond. The story of the case thus reported by a Waukegan paper:

Stickels for several years was manager of the Long Lake lumber yards of the Charles Harbaugh company. A few years back Harbaugh charged there was a shortage of over $5,000 in his accounts. At the time Stickels and Stratton and Mrs. Stanton signed a bond of $7,000, a guarantee that any shortage found in an audit would be paid.

Stickels was threatened with criminal prosecution on a charge of embezzlement and assured, according to his claim, that by signing the bond, he would not have to face criminal action. He was arrested, however, and indicted on a charge of embezzlement and acquitted by a jury in the Circuit court.

Upon being freed by the jury, Stickels and his bondsmen refused to consider making up any so-called shortage, maintaining that there was none. The civil suit resulted. The law firm of McGillivray, Eames, Vaughan and Tiller of Chicago represented the Harbaugh Lumber Co.

DEFENDS MODERN YOUTH IN ADDRESS

PROFESSOR TELLS REASON

Declares Paternalism is Passed and Parents Too Often to Blame for Failure of Offspring

Norman E. Richardson, professor of religious education at Northwestern university, came to the defense of modern youth in a recent address before the Western Congregational conference at Fond-du-Lac, Wis., and pointed out that the revolt against parental authority was due partly to the failure of parents to change their methods of government and instruction as their children advanced in years.

"Paternalism is taboo," he said. "The citadels of authority have been shaken. Coercion causes youth to blow a fuse. Parental irritation develops within the filial and parental relationship. But in defense of youth it must be said that parents often lack educational insight. Methods of parental control that are suitable when a child is 7 years old become sheer nagging if employed with a 17-year-old."

Conscious of Personality

"The girl of 14 who flung at her nagging grandmother, 'Why don't you act your age?' had simply reached the point where she wanted to decide for herself which pair of stockings to wear to school that day. The boy of 17 who said to his teacher, 'Somebody's getting nosy around here,' really meant that he was conscious of being a distinct personality occupying exclusively a legitimate bit of social territory."

"For some time it has been evident that both principles and practice formerly relied upon are now ineffective. In teaching older boys and girls moral or religious self-control, materials and methods used a generation ago in practically every home, school and church must now be laid aside. They are no longer acceptable. Young people respond to them negatively."

"The analyst finds little difficulty in locating facts concerning the offensive of youth. The conditions that have occasioned this revolution, likewise, are not hard to locate."

Research Results

"In a recent research project carried on at Northwestern university, 2,799 returns were received from high school boys and girls in the sophomore, junior and senior classes. Each girl was asked to describe accurately a recent experience in which she faced a problem of moral self-control. If she was tempted to do what was wrong or was unable to decide which path to take, the facts in the situation were to be given."

"Out of a total of 2,799 listed, 218 involved conflicts with parental authority or judgment. This problem of revolt occurred more frequently than any other in the entire list of eighty-four problems. A similar survey of boys' problems does not place conflict with parents as the one recurring with greatest frequency."

"The points at issue arose concerning motor car riding, dating with boys, friendships with girls, home responsibilities, choosing or preparing for a vocation, smoking, dancing, church attendance, drinking, accepting personal criticism, courtship, marriage, quitting school, making social contacts with strangers, attending the movies, what clothes to wear, time to retire, money for incidentals, conduct as a member of a social group, and many other practical considerations. Researches already have established the fact that youth's conflict with parental judgment does not occur within one group of relationship alone; it extends to the entire range of behavior activities."

Question to be Determined

"But apart from the ignorance and tactlessness of parents and teachers, there is a general personal bearing and mental attitude of youth that needs to be accounted for. Why it is that these older boys and girls demand a greater degree of self-determination than their parents required? Why are they sensitive to any curtailment of what they consider to be their liberties and rights?"

"The methods of study in the best public schools place the burden for thinking upon the pupil rather than upon the teacher; children are being taught how to think as well as how to memorize and believe. The materials of instruction are sifted so that they meet the tests of modern science, and the boys and girls today have a body of knowledge with which parents are not always familiar. The leaders of the present generation are too lazy or too much afraid to create the new social order in which alone the scientifically trained and courageous youth of today can live comfortably."

"Youth's offensive is a sign of progress. It is to be feared only by those who have a static notion of history and society. It constitutes an unprecedented opportunity and challenge. It is the very stuff of which the democracy of the future is to be made."

Speaking of supply and demand, flannel doesn't seem to be any cheaper now than in the days when the average woman wore half dozen petticoats.

BRAUN BROS OIL CO. HAS NEW PLANT HERE

Storage Tanks and Large Delivery Trucks at Highland Park for Service

Braun Brother Oil company has just completed its second bulk plant for the storage of fuel oil, at Highland Park.

It is located on the south side of Deerfield road, at the tracks, and comprises four 20,000 gallon tanks, affording a total storage capacity of 80,000 gallons. This, in reality, is only the first unit of what Braun Brothers contemplates for Highland Park. When completed, the plant will have a storage capacity of approximately 200,000 gallons. Carl Braun is in charge of the office at this plant.

The company also has a plant of this type at Northfield, west of Winnetka. The capacity here is 130,000 gallons and this plant, like the new one at Highland Park, is equipped with modern pumps and complete machinery for handling the fuel oil product in the most advantageous manner.

Eight huge tank trucks are utilized in distributing oil to patrons of the company, over a territory now extending from Evanston on the south to Lake Forest on the north and from the lake as far west as Milwaukee avenue.

The truck tanks are provided with every known device for handling this commodity, including special equipment for washing and cleaning tanks, or to prepare a tank in which heavy oil has been stored for the reception of a lighter fuel. Braun Brothers carry various grades of fuel oil, about six in number.

Two of their trucks tanks are especially equipped with a hose line of 100 feet through which oil may be pumped into the smaller basement storage tanks of the 200 gallon type, while the truck remains standing in the street, at the curb.

The fuel oil business has kept pace with building development on the north shore which has characterized this section in recent years, and Braun Brothers Oil company has kept one jump ahead in opportunity to grow in its line.

RIDE STREET CARS AS AID TO BEAUTY

For a long time electrical engineers have known of a constant loss in transmitting electricity. It has been noted that the loss is greater in heavily loaded street cars. Internationally famous scientists now claim that this electrical loss is absorbed by the human body, and is a great health producer, states the American Electric Railway association. Instead of going to the beauty parlors for electrical treatments, ladies will find great benefit from riding the street cars, according to the association. It has been noted that men who work around electrical generating plants are rarely ever sick. The men working on electric street cars have a high health record. All of which substantiates the theory advanced by scientists, claims the transportation body.
