The people are said to be deaf to the warnings of danger, but they can still hear the dinner bell. The business of repairing electric bells takes quite a boom for some weeks after Halloween. They claim in Wall street that money is easy, but not many people outside that district have noticed any ease in getting it.

HOLBROOK BLINN IN "THE PLAYS THE THING"

Opened Sunday at Sam Harris Theater, Chicago; Ran Year in New York

"The Play's the Thing" — the latest comedy from the pen of Ferenc Molnar, Hungarian dramatist, author of "Lilium," "The Swan," and other successes, is now playing a limited engagement at the Sam Harris theatre Sunday, Nov. 13, with Holbrook Blinn and his company under the direction of Gilbert Miller. The English adaptation of the play was made by P. G. Wodehouse, popular playwright and novelist, whose humorous English style reproduces effectively the subtleties and savanities of the original text.

A play about the theatre as its title denotes, "The Play's the Thing" calls upon Mr. Blinn to portray the part of a famous dramatist, Sandor Turai, a role unlike anything that he has played in recent years. In his company are appearing Hubert Druce as Mansky, a lyric writer; Martha Lorber as the beautiful prima donna, the toast of Europe, Harry Mestayer as leading man and Gavin Muir as a young composer, both of them in love with the prima donna. The action takes place at a house party in a castle on the Italian Riviera, where all five characters are guests.

The comedy has been staged under the personal direction of Mr. Blinn and has just closed a successful season at Henry Miller's Theatre, New York, where it ran almost an entire year, and might still be going, as it closed in the height of its success to allow Mr. Blinn and his company a brief holiday before undertaking their transcontinental tour.

TRY THIS NEXT SUNDAY

Get up and have a nice breakfast at home. Then go to Sunday school and church. After that go to the HOWARD-UELLE CAFETERIA and have a nice dinner—Baked ham, chicken, or roast beef with all that goes with it. Then hop in the family "bus" and go for a nice ride. Isn't that better than fussing around the kitchen half of the day? It's just as economical to eat at the Cafeteria as at home and no work connected with it. Serving Hours: 12:00 to 2:30

Washing Diseases Away

By DR. THOS. W. ROSS

(The appended article was written by Dr. Ross, one of the leading physicians and surgeons in Portland, Ore., in the interest of sanitation in power laundries. It was published in The Medico, a high class periodical devoted to the medical profession.)—Editor.

There is no commercial agency actually preventing disease as the present day laundry. Yet laundries never are mentioned by authorities on disease prevention because they are cold-blooded business affairs and not fussy committees or societies.

It requires little stretch of the imagination to picture the primitive laundries along the banks of any average European stream from its beginning as a tiny brooklet to its sluggish river formation. The women are gathered for miles and miles along this stream, rubbing and scrubbing their filthy family washings. The inhabitants close to the stream, for the most part, use this wash water for drinking purposes. These people drink dilutedly of what the people farther upstream have worn undilutedly.

From the rubbing stones to the wash tub there is a step forward, inasmuch as the wash tub water usually is disposed of as surface water; but from the wash tub to the modern laundry there is a thousand league leap of progress. Our present day laundry begins in health crusade at the start. It does not pollute water supplies. The laundry does not merely dilute the dirt and resisting bugs—it scientifically removes dirt and painlessly causes all bugs to expire.

The modern laundry uses hundreds of gallons of soft, pure water in every load of clothes that are washed.

Laundries do not start things through a few gallons of warm water and then successfully run every other bit of soiled clothing through the same solution. No home laundry invention ever solved the problem of producing lots of hot water for the tired housewife without making extra work.

The laborer's underwear and Aunt Lucy's brassiere both come home from the laundry clean and sweet. They are not only clean, white and sweet, but they are as sterile as the surgeon's gown. The bleaches which the laundry uses are the agents which make this condition possible. Every bleach is an oxidizing agent, and the process of oxidization is germicidal. When people remark that laundries do not clean they speak unthinkingly. Laundries do clean and in addition they kill millions of germ organisms that resist the tepid water of tub washing and flabby basement suds.

Without laundries every large city in the country would be constantly in the throes of epidemics of contagious skin diseases. What part the laundry plays in the prevention of all communicable disease is hard to estimate; however, when one pauses to think that these diseases have taken a decided slump since the spread of the steam laundry industry with its sanitary ideas, it is reasonable to suppose that they have played a not inconsiderable part.

It is not a high-brow idea to have a laundry wash your towels and intimate things. They go smack dab against your skin and they should be as sterile as they are free from dirt.

The modern laundry has stopped millions of female backaches. It has prevented thousands of divorces and it has brought content and smiles to thousands of homes. Monday is no longer hell to millions of women.
