TRIBUTE TO THE PRINTER

The Christian Science Monitor, in a contribution signed by O. S., says this:
"About authors we hear more than enough; even editors are sometimes brought to our attention; but of the third estate of literature, composed of men of letters who work as hard and at least as well as any, we seldom hear or think. The printer, that silent but never-sleeping partner in every literary undertaking, is too commonly ignored. Take up any book from your reading table and turn to the title page: there you will find the author's name in bold lettering, and beneath it the name of the publisher; but you will look vainly from end to end of that book to find the names of the men who set it in type. Remembering how often I have tried their patience and how much I have profited by their knowledge and forbearance, I feel impelled, since no one else does so, to acknowledge, though tardily, the debt we all owe to these silent heroes of the composing room.
"Sometimes, after reading a worthwhile book, I have glanced at the last flyleaves in the vague hope of finding some such sentence as this from the printer: 'I have set this up because I was paid to, but I assure the hesitating purchaser that it is not worth his money as it was not worth my time.' The fact that we never find such sentences is another proof of magnificent self-control. Good printers 'follow copy' as faithfully as the wake follows a ship. They follow it through wildernesses of footnotes, through bogs of pathos and deserts of ineptitude. If a writer is so misguided as to think that a succession of dots . . . three in the midst of a sentence and four at the end . . . is a helpful nuisance in punctuation, conveying a sense somewhat different from that of the dash—I recall that I once cherished this opinion myself—there are some printers, or there used to be, condescending enough to follow copy even in that, although they must not be expected to do it very often.
"Printing has been going on for almost five centuries, not to consider the Chinese, and yet no social reformer has drawn attention to the pathetic fact that printers have to read every word they print. (Even of this present essay some printer whom I shall never see to thank will have to read every word. Every word!)"

DEERFIELD GRAMMER SCHOOL Who's Who

A Toast to Parents
(by a teacher)
Sometimes I think that parents Are a funny kind of folk, And yet they seldom see, themselves, Just wherein lies the joke. They come to us so serious About their children dear, That we must grave as judges be, And let no smile appear. "My son's extremely brilliant," So says the fond mama. Alas, with us, that brilliant son Comes hardly up to par. "My darling child," another says, "Has ne'er been understood." We understand his heedless ways "Most anybody could. "Have you a grudge against my child?" Why should you keep him back? His work at home is wonderful, I fail to see his lack. So cries the father in his wrath, Around promotion day; Yet we both know that child of his Has spent the year in play. We hear about the picked-on child. The nervous child we know. And thus the stories go. We listen and we sympathize,— But I'll confess to you, We have a feeling that to us The sympathy is due.

Sometimes, I think that parents Are the nicest kind of folk; And when I say this thing to you I leave behind—the joke. Just lay some need before them And hear their quick reply—"What can I do to help you? What part can we supply?" Perhaps some potted plants We ask some folks to leave, And then gifts big and generous For school use we receive. It's not the gift that matters. It's the spirit of it all.

It's their readiness to answer When they understand the call. The faith these parents give us,— It should keep us staunch and true "Do as you think best with Mary. I am trusting her to you." And best of all, the letter We so delight to get; "What you have done for Johnny We can never forget."

At parents, wise or funny, You may smile as I have done. Yet I say, and you will join me, "God bless 'em, every one." (Selection taken from "Common Ground")

WILMOT PROGRESSIVE CLUB IS DISBANDED

Will Organize Independent Social Club; Meetings at Members' Homes

The Wilmot Progressive club, which has been a very active organization for the past eight years for the benefit of the children of the Wilmot school and for parents of the district has been abandoned. Thousands of dollars had been made and spent at the Wilmot school for equipment and supplies, including paper, ink, graduating gifts, Christmas entertainments, desks, chairs, reading circle books, furniture, swings, a sink, and many other things.

The parents of the district and people of the community have had the pleasure of getting together and enjoying many social events, such as card parties and dances. These affairs which were supervised by the club and operated under very strict restriction were always given by full consent and permitted by president of the school board. However recently the club decided they did not care to stay at the school any longer, so they left with no harm done to the building or equipment, and organized a new club, The Independent Social club, at the home of Mrs. Ed Long last Wednesday afternoon. The following are officers: Mrs. Leslie Behrs, president; Mrs. Harry Whitcomb, vice president; Mrs. Earl Frost, secretary, and Mrs. C. Malfald, treasurer. The next meeting will be held at the Malfald home.
