Ely, director of the ert Scholes of Peoria, speaker of the Institute for Research in Land Eco- house in the 55th General assembly, nomics and Public Utilities of Northwestern university, said in a speech recently before the American Construction council.

"Sometimes the forecast of probabilities is based on a 'hunch,' guesswork or rule of thumb information gained from past experience," said Dr. Ely. "More and more, however, the probabilities are estimated in the light of past experience, tested and set in order. We need to know the past in order to peer far into the future. We need a definite and actual knowledge of the past and present to keep our expectations of future relationships in reasonable bounds.

Based on Data "In proportion as we base our relationship on scientifically gathered data we will find our present expectations ripen more nearly into future reality. In this way, by stabilizing our anticipation of what the future has in store, science, especially economics, is making an can make a great contribution to business."

Taxation, Dr. Ely pointed out, is a factor that must be seriously considered in industry.

sufficiently into account," he continued. "We do not appreciate all the facts. We are concerned not merely with the heavy burden of taxation which takes a very considerable percentage of all our wealth-some say 10 per cent in many places and some say even 12 per cent of the national income-but we should be concerned with its tremendous growth. In New York and Chicago the burden has about doubled in ten years.

Kansas Railway Mail Employe Believes That This Is In Future

Walter O. Tuchfarder! a Kansas railway mail clerk, anticipates that the air mail will eventually be distributed on routes by air mail clerks. He has written the big post office department in Washington about it, and his letter says:

"Anticipating the time when the air mail will be distributed en route, I wish to offer myself as a candidate for air mail clerk." This is application number one, and it has been made a matter of careful record in Washington as it may be necessary to make such appointments some-

Uplands and lowlands alike will said here today.

Paying tribute to the successes of the State Department of Conservation, directed by William J. Stratton, Mr. Scholes said he believed the state of Illinois had a fair sample of what could be done if adequate resources were available. But all the department has done, he added, is only the merest sample for it is possible under the proposed bond issue to take the benefits of conservation to every part of the state.

Restore Lands

River bottoms, flooded with water to the ruination of countless Illinois farmers Mr. Scholes said, would be acquired and given back to the Illinois and the Father of Waters. many places. This, he said, will in turn protect other farm lands which would not be flooded if it were not for the excessive number of dikes confining the streams.

CHAMPION SINGER FOR RECORDS CELEBRATES

Billy Murray, Who in Early Days of Phonograph Sang Often, Has Anniversary

Billy Murray, who in the earliest River Bottoms Often Flooded to days of the phonograph often sang the same song 150 times a day, passed his thirtieth anniversary of record making in New York this week. Today he is still in the profession but when he sings once, one million records, instead of one single screechy cylinder, can be made from the reproduc-

Murray, who during his thirty years of experience, has made more records than any other entertainer in the history of the phonograph, told Farm and Fireside how he started by being a member of a "barber-shop quartet" in Denver as a youth and was engaged by a road show company, which went broke before it reached San Francisco, where he first sang for records.

"In those days," he said, "making records was a real job. A song had to be sung and sung good and loud at least once for each individual record. We were paid for each perfect record and great were the days when we could get the man who carried away the finished ones to stumble and drop his tray. The broken records had to be made over at extra pay. I have watched the phonograph business grow from that time until today when one sings into a microphone and makes a master from which a million records can be made if desired. I have only one regret, that I did not accept stock in pay for some of my carliest work. Shares in one company for which I sang are now quoted
