

EXHIBIT SPECIMENS FROM SEVERAL LANDS

FOUND BY EXPEDITIONS

Interesting Relics of Past Ages Shown at Museum; Skulls and Bones of Ancient Mammals

The first exhibition of specimens collected on five recent zoological expeditions of Field Museum of Natural History is now open to the public, it was announced today by D. C. Davies, director of the museum.

The exhibition includes the skulls of various mammals obtained in India, Africa, South America and the Arctic regions, and a case of the skins of birds, many of brilliant plumage, collected in these places. The expeditions represented are the Chicago Daily News-Field Museum Abyssinian Expedition, the Captain Marshall Field Brazilian Expedition, the John Borden-Field Museum Alaska-Arctic Expedition, the James Simpson-Roosevelt Asiatic Expedition, and the Conover-Everard African Expedition.

Skulls of Polar Bears
Skulls of polar bears, peninsular giant bears, and Pacific walrus, shot by members of the Borden expedition, which invaded Alaskan waters aboard the yacht "Northern Light" last summer, are among the specimens exhibited. The Simpson-Roosevelt, is represented by the huge skull of an Indian rhinoceros. A still larger specimen—the skull of an enormous white rhinoceros, felled by members of the Conover-Everard expedition in Tanganyika Territory, Africa, is also included in the collection. This is an extremely rare species of rhinoceros. Its skull is comparable in size to that of the colossal creatures of prehistoric times. H. Boardman Conover and John T. Zimmer of the expedition.

From Abyssinia
The Chicago Daily News-Field Museum Abyssinian Expedition is represented by skulls of mountain nyala and an Abyssinia ibex, both extremely rare. The former is sometimes called "the Queen of Sheba's antelope"; the ibex is a species of wild goat. Dr. Wilfred H. Osgood, curator of zoology, was leader of this expedition. Another interesting feature of the exhibition is the skull of a jaguar, shot by Mrs. Marshall Field of New York, while she was a member of the Captain Marshall Field Brazilian Expedition. The skins of the animals are being prepared for mounting and exhibition at a later date.

Others who are represented by trophies in the exhibition are John Borden, Mrs. Borden, and Mrs. R. B. Slaughter of Chicago, and Miss Frances Ames of San Francisco, all of whom were members of the Borden expedition; and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt of New York, who felled the Indian rhinoceros on the Simpson-Roosevelt expedition.

NEXT PLAY GIVEN BY THEATRE GUILD

IS TO BE "LITTLE EYOLF"

Ibsen Drama to Be Staged in March in North Shore Towns; Tribute to Playwright

A play by Ibsen is the choice of the North Shore Theater Guild for its third offering of the winter season. "Little Eyolf," a lesser known but more theatrically interesting play than any of the others by "the greatest dramatist since Shakespeare," will be presented by the Guild early in March, following its usual itinerary from Lake Forest to Evanston.

The decision of the Guild's play reading committee to do a play by Ibsen was largely influenced by the fact that this year is the hundredth anniversary of the great Norwegian playwright's birth. It is felt that by so doing the "little theatre" can best fill an important place in American community life, as no professional theater can. That is, it can bring to each community an accurate staging of a particular time. This year, dramatic organizations all over the country are devoting themselves to a study of Ibsen's works. Locally, Ibsen's "Doll House" is being produced at Lake Forest university, while the Goodman Theater is presenting "The Wild Duck."

Is Different
As for "Little Eyolf," it is different from most of Ibsen's other plays because it ends on a happier note. Ibsen is usually given to tragedy, completely and devotedly. He is fond of leaving a profound problem in the minds of his audiences. While "Little Eyolf" bears all the marked characteristics of Ibsenish drama, it has a difference that should make it more popular with North Shore audiences.

Mr. David Owen, director of the North Shore Theater Guild, means to make the production of "Little Eyolf" a real tribute to the great dramatist, and a milestone in Guild history. All indications are that this Ibsen play will be the best thing that the Guild has ever attempted, or is likely ever to do again. The cast is as near professional as any amateur cast could be. Every drama-lover who sees the play will go away completely satisfied, as "Little Eyolf" is considered by many critics to be one of the most dramatic plays ever written. The cast will be announced later.

MOTORISTS PAY LARGE SUMS TO VISIT PARKS

Motorists paid $416,757 in tolls to visit the national parks during the season of 1927, and a total of 557,079 private cars entered the parks during this period, according to a bulletin issued by the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor Club.

Commenting on the part motor travel is playing in developing the nation's beauty spots and playgrounds, the bulletin points out that this travel demonstrates the need for improved highways in the national parks.

TRACE HERRICK FAMILY TO KING ALFRED TIME

France Goes Back to Early Anglo-Saxon Days

Ambassador Myron T. Herrick's family back to the days of King Alfred in England.

The first trace of the ancient origin of the family which has its own feudal seat in Leicestershire, was given the ambassador by a London writer who found clues in the British museum. Yellowed pages of English history told the story of a race of stalwart people who always have been pioneers.

The family traces its origin to the Danish Chief Ericke who invaded England during the reign of King Alfred and compelled to re-people the wasted district of East Anglin.

The Norman conquest found Eric, the Forester, head of the family, owning extensive domains around the source of the Severn River and along the borders of Wales. Eric fought with King Harold to repel the invaders.

Following the conquest, Eric found favor with King William and obtained important posts at the court and in the army. Members of the family repeatedly found their way into history. One was Robert Eyryk of Stretton, who was consecrated bishop of Lichfield and Chester. Another was Sir William Eyryk of Stretton, who attended the Prince of Wales on his expedition into Gascony in 1355.

It was Sir William's fifth son, Henry, who, voyaging to Virginia on one of her father's mercantile ventures, and thence to Salem, Mass., founded the American Ambassador Herrick traces his line.

RECITAL IN HONOR OF SCRUB WOMAN'S GIFT

Annual Affair at Everett, Wash. Church in Memory of Her Generosity

Rich and poor of Everett, Washington, recently held their annual organ recital in the First Baptist Church in honor of Mrs. Mathea Severson, a scrubwoman of that city, who, when the church was a struggling institution, donated a $12,000 organ out of her own savings.

In the years of toil since she made the sacrifice, says the American Magazine, Mrs. Severson, by diligent saving and wise investments, has amassed a fortune of about $100,000 and expects to retire soon from her work in the office buildings of the city. For thirty years she has been a familiar figure in the corridors of the up-town buildings, where she works from four o'clock in the morning until late at night.

Mrs. Severson immigrated to America from Norway in 1900. Her husband, who was a carpenter, was in ill health and it fell to her to make the family living. She then established her list of customers and working for fifteen cents an hour managed to make thirty-five dollars a month. During the war period her earnings sometimes rose as high as one hundred and thirty-five dollars a month and from that amount she managed to make shrewd investments that started her small fortune.

When the church was erected, there was difficulty in securing the funds to equip it and the humble widow astounded the congregation with her offer to bear the expense of the organ alone. In addition, her other contributions to the church have been a big factor in developing the institution. Each year a special recital is held in her honor. The toil worn, fifty-four year old woman attends in the same black silk hat and old fur coat that she has worn for years.
