PUBLIC LIBRARY

Dhan Gopal Mukerji Awarded the Newbery Medal.

The Newbery Medal has been awarded annually since 1922 for the most distinguished contribution to the literature for American children. This prize for the best juvenile of the preceding year is appropriately named after John Newbery, London bookseller who lived in 1713-67, and who first conceived the idea of publishing books expressly for children.

To Dhan Gopal Mukerji, a name familiar to many both through his books and through his lectures, has been awarded the much coveted prize for his book "Gay-Neck." It is an absorbing and interesting story of a beautiful pigeon owned by an Indian boy in Calcutta. The announcement of this award was made at the Annual Conference of the American Library association held in June.

Winners of the Newbery Medal for previous years and the books for which the prize was awarded are: Van Loon, H. W., The Story of Mankind.

Lofting, High, Voyages of Doctor Dolittle.

Hawes, C. B., The Dark Frigate.

Finger, C. T., Tales from Silver Lands.

Chrisman, A. B., Shen of the Sea. James, Will, Smoky.

After the joyful ringing of the wedding bells, comes the ringing of the doorbells by solicitors trying to sell the couple their supplies.

NEW MATERIAL TAKES PLACE OF OLD HORNS

MANUFACTURING CENTER

Leominster, Mass., Experiences Revival of Industry When Science Produces Substitute Stuff

A Story About Leominster

Leominster, Massachusetts, is an old New England town, justly renowned for the part it has played in the history of the World's greatest Republic. For a long time Leominster was an industrial center famous for horn goods that were of the most approved style. The horns of cattle were made up into ornaments and articles for usefulness that were known to ladies of high degree, who led in fashions.

The scrawny long-horned cattle of the western plains were killed in the nineteenth century principally for their horns, hoofs and hides. These animals began to disappear, when refrigerator cars and ships, and growing population, entered into the business of food production and distribution. There was a shortage of horns. Combs and hair ornaments suddenly became scarce. The social and industrial tragedy was up to Leominster.

Meets Challenge. Leominster met the challenge which threatened its existence. So about twenty-five years ago that New England town graduated from horns to the field of plastics, just as South Bend, Indiana, followed the long trail of producing covered wagons, barn wagons and finally—automobiles. In these changes of affairs in cities the industrial history of the Nation is written.

Today, in Leominster, there are great factory buildings that make a product that has succeeded "horns." The industrial chemists take definite quantities of camphor, alcohol and nitrocellulose and they follow rather complex but definite chemical rules and practice with the result that they develop one of the most remarkable substances for general use that has ever been invented. It is pyralin, which is given a place in industry and science as a triumph of chemical genius.

The chemical transformation of cotton—or cellulose,—into industrial products is worth considering by those who want to keep up-to-date. There are hundreds of articles which we accept as ordinary in our every day life which formerly were but a meaningless mass of fluid in huge vats.

Various Products

So it is up in Leominster where pyralin is turned out in large quantities. There it is manufactured into horn-rimmed spectacles, sets of beautiful toiletries, and other useful articles. The higher class manufacturers of pens and pencils used colored barrels of this substance and it is so hard that trucks can run over it without breaking it. You will find that radio panels and dials, buttons, automobile windows and glare shields, and chessmen and checkers, poker chips and dice, and a great variety of advertising novelties are made of it. It shows up on fishing tackle, and on children's pencil cases, on buckles of shoes, and even in hat ornaments and flowers that do not fade.

Leominster is a prosperous city today, and its inhabitants naturally prefer chemistry's plastics to the horns and hoofs.

The teacher asked little Ruth what her father's name was.

"Daddy," she answered.

"Yes, dear," said the teacher, "but what does your mother call him?"

"She don't call him nothin'!"

Ruth answered earnestly, "She likes him."

She—"What happened to you? Were you in an accident?"

He—"No, I was being shaved by a lady barber when a mouse ran across the floor."

They were returning from a trip to France and the old white cliffs of Dover were getting clearer and clearer as the steamer ploughed through the choppy sea.

A boisterous man of the type so often encountered on such excursions was airing his knowledge of things in general, but he was infinitely puzzled at the round of laughter which greeted his cheery announcement: "Well, we shall soon be on pomme de terre again now."

They were watching a love scene. Wife—"Why is it you never made love to me like that?"

Husband—"Say, do you know what that guy is paid for doing that?"

Question—"What is a collective noun?"

Answer—"An ash-can."
