NUMBER 17

PUSSYFOOTING ON CRIME REMEDIES

An editorial in a leading Eastern newspaper, in discussing the crime record of the United States, claims that in order to check crime we must have a more drastic method of selective immigration. To substantiate its argument it points out a number of foreign names among those indicted in Chicago's $5,000,000 liquor ring conspiracy.

Without going into the immigration question or the name which an individual bears, will the mere passage of more restrictive legislation of one kind and another which continually tends to encroach upon the rights of law-abiding citizens, reform the criminal? The majority of remedies proposed for crime dodge the main issue, namely, quick and speedy capture, trial and conviction of the lawbreaker, says the Manufacturer.

We have a mania for passing laws which offer loopholes for the escape of the criminal. As an example, an honest householder owns a revolver and a criminal owns a revolver. In order to prevent the criminal's using a gun, legislation is proposed which would make it unlawful to own a gun. The peaceful citizen immediately has to become a lawbreaker or dispense with his gun. Will such a law in any way tend to disarm the criminal?—Not that anybody has a record of.

If a criminal obeyed the law, he wouldn't be a criminal. Then why not make our legislation applicable to him, and not a dragnet affair which takes in every person who has committed no crime? In other words, punish the guilty and not the innocent. Such a policy will do more to secure law enforcement than pussyfooting around the main issue.

AMERICANS LARGEST USERS OF VEHICLES

RUN AROUND ON WHEELS

European Observer Says Other Peoples Do Not Use Them So Much; Survey Shows Touring Mania

A newly arrived observer of American ways finds that "no other people run around on wheels as Americans or live so large a part of their lives in transit."

"Where are they going, why are they speeding, what do they hope to find?" And then he answers his own question thus: "No rational explanation can suffice for a wandering so purposeless."

However, one of Secretary Hoover's efficient bureaus seems to have an answer. It reports that the main American shrines of natural wonders, the national parks, are receiving five per cent more worshipful motorists than last year at this time—and twenty per cent more last year than the year before.

More than 1,400,000 cars, carrying 10,000,000 passengers, crossed the country to these national parks since 1921. This would seem to indicate something more important than "pen-nants, hot dogs, paper bathing girls and speed."

The cynical observer says his impressions of America are these: "A never-ending road, a thousand farms, grade-crossing signs, back axles, towns passed at thirty miles an hour."

Mr. Hoover says there is something more than this to America-on-wheels. Something more than aimless wandering and the "roving spirit" takes the nation to the national parks. And perchance the thirty per cent increase in motor tourists during the past five years has helped the Commerce Department in its successful war against British rubber control.

If this scandalous business keeps on it will not be long until the boy who was raised on castor oil won't have a chance as a candidate.

It may be all right for people to get out to air their grievances, but it does not accomplish much to hot air them.
