PRESIDENT APPROVES BUYING FOREST LAND

SIGNS BILL FOR PURPOSE

Measure Provides for Purchase of 8 Million Dollars Worth in Next Three Years; Conservation

President Coolidge acted wisely, as usual, recently in signing the McNary-Woodruff bill, appropriating amounts aggregation eight million dollars for the purchase of national forest lands during the next three years. The bill is regarded as a signal victory for the national forest movement and will, it is said, be of great benefit to the people of the north, the south and the east. The passage of the bill is said to be of particular moment to the people of Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, and the pine and hardwood states of the South, and will also make it possible, it is said, for the national government to purchase the famous Waterville area of New Hampshire and add it to the White Mountain National Forest, a beauty spot known to tourists all over America.

Movement Growing

The forest movement is growing in America and deservedly so. Less than a generation ago it seemed that our forests were to pass entirely out of existence and that we would become a treeless nation. Then the conservationists began to raise their voices and following this the moves for the preservation of our forests and for the reforesting of waste places was put under way.

Today, as the average tourist well knows, the national government is developing forests in all parts of the country and the state governments are following suit, by developing state parks, a number of which include state forests. All of this is as it should be. We need the forests because we will always need wood for certain purposes and cannot afford to depend on importation altogether. Then we need the forests from the ethical side of life, too. There is nothing more restful than a great forest, nothing which tends to give man greater confidence in the wisdom of his Creator. A trip through a magnificent forest is as good as a sermon. We need the trees and every good citizen should give the forestry movement all possible assistance.

U. S. DUTY TO GUARD PANAMA CANAL ZONE

MUST CONTROL ENVIRONS

Necessary to Keep Central American Countries Pacified, Same as Britain at Suez Canal

It is because of the Suez Canal that every government in its vicinity is under British mandate, under a British protectorate or subsidized by British money. It is because of the Suez Canal that the British Royal Air Force was recently called upon to bomb Arabian towns as a lesson that the Pax Britannica must prevail. It is for the same reason that every movement in Egypt which, directly or indirectly, looks toward a diminishing of British power over Egypt's military or foreign affairs must be nipped in the bud.

This policy grows out of vital necessity. Even a remote threat to the Suez Canal is a threat to the life of Great Britain and of the empire. The British are Suez-conscious. The matter might be dismissed at this point were it not for the very different attitude which the British take when the United States is faced by precisely the same situation. The United States must be just as much concerned for the stability of countries in the neighborhood of the Panama Canal as are the British in the case of the Suez. The Panama waterway is a capital link for American trade. It is a vital and vulnerable factor in American defense.

Inconsistent

Yet, when the United States brings pressure to bear upon the republic of Panama for ratification of a treaty making for security of the canal, British propaganda cries out against the iniquity of a powerful nation "oppressing" its weaker neighbor, says the Philadelphia Ledger. When the United States acts in Nicaragua in the interest of stabilization as Britain acts in Arabian countries, British propaganda and its American offshoots are loud in denunciation. And the world is sentimentally called to witness that Panama and Nicaragua are members of the League of Nations.

Perhaps the strangest and most remarkable fact about all this business is the manner in which certain sections of American public opinion and the American press are taken in by this British propaganda. Probably, for one thing, the American public is not Panama-conscious in the sense in which the British public is overwhelmingly Suez-conscious.

The British government has the right and the duty to take vigorous measures for protection of its commercial, military and political interests in the Suez Canal area, even though they involve interference in the domestic affairs of Egypt or neighboring countries. The United States government has the same right and duty. Any other course would be a plain invitation to trouble, if not disaster.

The most unimportant job we know is to go to a national convention as the alternate to a delegate who is on the job all the time.

BRAIN WORKERS EAT LIGHT BREAKFASTS

NO PANCAKES OR SAUSAGE

Heavy Food All Right for Those Who Do Manual Labor, But Not For People in Sedentary Pursuits

Pancakes and sausage may be alright for the lumberjack's breakfast, but they won't do for the morning meal of a university student or an office worker. Business and college is organized to carry the peakload in the morning, says C. E. Willard, assistant professor of business organization at Northwestern university, who has just completed a survey of workers' efficiency, and the heavy breakfast of badly chosen or bolted food impairs quick and clear thinking.

"It is well known," says Prof. Willard, "that business is organized on the basis of the greater part of the work being done in the morning hours. One reason for this is that the incoming mails in all big concerns arrive the first thing in the morning. The greater part of the day's work in a great many lines of business, as, for example, mail order houses, is based on the mail. At Northwestern university about 80 per cent of the classes are held in the morning."

Light Morning Meal

The American business man and student cannot hope to work to full efficiency if he starts the day's work on an unusually heavy breakfast, and Prof. Willard advocates a light morning meal of fruit juices, cereals, and toast.

"It is part of business efficiency," Prof. Willard says, "to arrange conferences in the morning and a sign of inefficiency of lack of knowledge when they are arranged differently. The morning is a longer period in most lines of work than the afternoon. Therefore, the worker starts with a greater objective ahead of him in the morning than in the afternoon. At the university the majority of the brain work is done in the morning, and the afternoon is left to laboratory work, gymnasium and routine subjects."

Because modern business is expecting the majority of the work in the morning, Prof. Willard pointed out the necessity for a good breakfast, but one which is well-balanced and unburied.

PLAN HIGHWAY FROM MAINE TO CANADA SOON

Northern Maine will be connected with Canada by completion of the Cambellton and St. Leonard New Brunswick highway, 115 miles in length, according to information received by the touring Bureau of the Chicago Motor Club. This highway is being built with a view to encouraging tourist travel.

Another bulletin from the Chicago Motor club advises that in far away Latvia the cabinet of ministers, in compliance with a decision of Parliament, has ordered the ministry of communications to draft a law imposing a 33 per cent tax on alcoholic beverages, the revenue to be used for road building.
