LATEST INDUSTRIAL WONDER DESCRIBED

FOR DECORATIVE PURPOSES

Nacrolaque New Kind of Substance Which Gives Effect of Mother of Pearl; Various Uses

Another new material has been brought out to supply the needs of decorators and architects. It is a new plastic material, known as Nacrolaque, and it has been adopted and extensively used by them in achieving unusual effects, especially in the new style of art trend called Art Moderne.

It is the latest of the new materials developed by industry to supply modern needs. Nacrolaque is an entirely new kind of substance which gives the effect of mother of pearl but surpasses it in the richness of its coloring, its possibility of taking color and the warmth of its effects. It is scintillating in appearance and silk-like to the touch. It is as fine as ivory and it is stated can be given the polish of ivory.

It can also be worked like wood. It is not inflammable. These qualities have given it a great variety of uses. Besides architecture and interior decoration, it is being used in automobile building, the manufacture of musical instruments and for the decoration of sports articles such as tennis rackets.

In mural decoration it is used either alone or in alternate panels with cloth or wood. It is utilized in the making of artistic tables and in the decoration of windows. It has been found of great value for signs or name plates not only because of the handsome appearance it gives but also because of its visibility even in relative obscurity.

Its wide use in many arts is due not only to the fact that it can be substituted to obtain better effects than those given by other materials, but also because it represents a definite factor in modern decoration and when properly employed can be used to develop new concepts.
