MANY WOMEN ENGAGED

Is Healthful Craft, According to Report; Many New Designs Shown

Trimming lamp wicks, a duty of the Tomorrow he may fool you. Colonial housewife and those of other generations that followed the Colonial period, has given way to weaving as an occupation for the women of today. More different types of weaving are being done by American women than by those of any other country today, says the Woman's Home Companion, calling attention to the fact that modern inventions such as the electric months old, in Ravinia. Finder please tel. light have caused women to look about for new fields of industry. Thus they have settled on one of the most ancient of the crafts, and have studied countries to improve beauty of design and workmanship.

"Hand weaving today is an agency for health," says the magazine. "So File RU-76487 generally has the curative value of handwork come to be appreciated that no modern hospital without its fully equipped department for occupational thus useful in health restoring weaving has a particularly high place. And much fine weaving is being done by persons who learned the craft as a part of therapeutic treatment during convalescence after an opera-Freight Claim Agent tion, or rest after nervous exhaustion."

In their willingness to try new designs and patterns and to introduce new methods into weaving American women have exhibited certain characteristics which show their kinship with ancient and more adventurous persons, the magaine concludes.

Yet the telephone was perfected and IN WEAVING IN U. S. now has come its younger brother, the radio, who is still an infant, albeit a lusty growing one. And the end is not yet. If you see some ambitious youth experimenting with the fantastic, don't tell him it can't be done.
