> WOMAN MAKES SUCCESS IN LAMP SHADE ART

Started on Small Scale on Her Back Porch and Now Has Several Stores

Beginning her business career on her back porch eight years ago Mrs. Virginia Darling, of Tuckahoe and New York City, today employs twelve artists at her crowded New York work shop and has for several years doubled her output of decorated lamp shades every six months.

Suddenly faced with the necessity of supporting her small son and daughter Mrs. Darling, who had sold a few of her shades to friends, decided to strike out for success with one of the biggest gift shops in New York City. With a bulging case of lamp shades she waited two hours to see the buyer for the store, was too frightened to make a sales talk and was speechless when he said:

"I like these. Bring me a dozen by next Wednesday."

"I suppose I went home on a slow local train," says Mrs. Darling in The American Magazine, "but I felt as if I were flying every step of the way. Cement Work & Grading Contractor I set to work feverishly to have the shades ready on the date set for their delivery. And when I turned them in I came away with an order for a hundred dollars' worth of lamp shades."

After six months Mrs. Darling had saved several hundred dollars and was ready to rent quarters in the city.

"That was four years ago," she says, "and the new business thrived from the beginning. We have doubled and trebled our output every six months or so."

She now owns a charming house at Tuckahoe where she is raising her son and daughter.

FIGHTING TO SAVE LONGHORN CATTLE

Success of Man Who Secured Congressional Appropriation for Purpose

The historic race of Longhorn cattle, brought to this country 400 years ago by the Spanish Conquistadors, has been preserved for the nation by the work of Will C. Barnes, Indian fighter, legislator and holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor for Hero-

Announcement that congress had voted $3,000 to establish a Longhorn herd in the Wichita National Forest, in Oklahoma, recalled a fight for preservation of these animals in the United States, begun years ago when Barnes, on frequent trips to the old cattle ranges, noted that these cattle were slowly disappearing before the demand for better bred animals. They were once the only breed that would survive the droughts and winters of the plains.

"For ten years Barnes applied all his powers in patient persuasion," ays the Farm and Fireside magazine. "And when congress finally appropriated the money to Barnes himself was assigned the task of finding the cattle. Here and there he picked up individual cows of the genuine breed in the remote back country of Texas. Old Mexico had to be called upon to furnish the quota of pure Longhorn bulls. The herd now grazes in peace n the pastures of the Wichita ForPROFESSIONAL BUSINESS
