EXCAVATE ANCIENT ARBITRATION TREATY

ENGRAVED ON STONE SLAB
Dutch Expedition on Island of Argos Brings to Light Oldest Known Record of the Kind

During the recent Dutch excavation work at Argos, writes La Gazette de Hollande, fragments have been found on a limestone stela—perpendicular column with inscription—on which the text of a treaty between two neighboring towns in Crete—Knossos and Tylissos—has been engraved, says a special dispatch from The Hague to the Christian Science Monitor. This treaty dates from the middle of the fifth century B. C. and contains interesting data about the international relations between these two embryo states. They had been at war, and by the meditation of the town of Argos peace was restored. The treaty contains clauses concerning the line of conduct to be followed by the contracting parties, both in times of peace and war, and the diplomatic support to be afforded by one town to the other in negotiations with third parties. The friendship goes as far as to arrange that the calendar of one town shall correspond with that of the other. Economic clauses provide for regulations for exports and imports of merchandise, and the rights and obligations of the citizens of Tylissos within the confines of Knossos, and vice versa.

Second Stone
A second stone containing a similar treaty, but about 50 years later, was also excavated by the Dutch experts, in 1914, at the spot where Tylissos existed. Here it is stipulated that neither of the respective cities may conclude treaties with other states without first agreeing about the matter with each other. In case of disagreement, Argos will decide the controversy. Here we have one of the oldest arbitration treaties ever recorded, and it is possible that the missing part of the stela recently found contained also such provisions, as both stones resemble each other in many respects.

Begun in 1902
The excavations which led to this discovery were begun in 1902 under the auspices of Dr. C. W. Vollgraff who at the proposal of the Dutch government was appointed a foreign member of the French Archaeological Institute at Athens. Dr. Vollgraff was enabled to accept this appointment owing to the generous support of the well-known Maecenas, Dr. A. E. H. Goekoop, of The Hague. There is an enviable tribute implied in the remark: .. and they drive a Pierce-Arrow Makers of other fine cars have spent years and millions trying to capture a sentiment which naturally flows to Pierce-Arrow. That sentiment reflects a well-earned faith that no other car is quite so fine. Recently there have been interesting price revisions affecting the entire new Pierce-Arrow line. But there has been no lessening of Pierce-Arrow quality—no littlest compromise with the original, modern beauty of design and coloring and appointment. Each car in today's offering is of current production. The complete line, without reservation, is represented. $2475 to $7500 (AT BUFFALO) Your present car will be accepted at fairly appraised value.
