

New Chicago Post Building

CHICAGO POST HAS FINE NEW BUILDING

IS NOTABLE STRUCTURE

Something About This Splendid Newspaper and Its New Home Improvements in All Departments

A notable epoch in the life of a great Chicago newspaper was marked recently by the completion of the magnificent new home of The Chicago Evening Post at 211 West Wacker drive. It was the culmination of years of effort toward a definite goal, the realization of an ideal. But more important than the building itself, architectural gem that it is, are the ideals and achievements of the newspaper itself and the work of the men who made it.

Towering nineteen stories above Chicago's newest and proudest great thoroughfare, the Post building stands as a symbol of these ideals, achievements and the long years of steadfast resolves which preceded its creation. The Post has never been a paper to appeal to the sensation seeker. The old-time definition of news as "everything of general interest that is fit to print" has always been and ever will be good enough for The Post. Its reputation as "Chicago's cleanest newspaper" means more to The Post than its wonderful new building.

John C. Shaffey, publisher of The Post, assumed control of the paper in 1901, and it is through his leadership and insistence on the maintaining of high standards that The Post has been able to keep at the top these twenty-seven years. Prior to his stewardship The Post had been ably conducted by two men. Its founder, James W. Scott's death in 1895 Herman H. Kohlsaat became the publisher and remained in control until 1901, when Mr. Shaffey acquired the paper.

Moving from its old headquarters at 12 South Market street to the new era in the life of the paper. Increased effort, increased enthusiasm, at once infused the staff. New and better features were immediately added to make the pages of The Post more attractive. The entirely new mechanical equipment, most notably the giant presses below the lower level of Wacker drive, which are capable of turning out 100,000 sixty-page papers an hour, gave added inspiration to this greater zeal toward making a finer paper.

An extensive advertising campaign, by which the story of The Post is being told in striking color pictures and in words, was one of the first moves of the management in heralding the new order of things. Old readers as well as hundreds of new ones noted with pleasure the more attractive and more interesting tone of The Post's pages. They agreed with The Post advertising slogan, "Chicago's Cleanest and Best Newspaper—a page for every age."

New activity was also the order in the circulation department of the paper. With a fleet of shining new motor trucks, transportation of The Post editions to centers of distribution was made more swift and sure, thus largely obviating the daily fear of countless steadfast readers that they might miss their copy of The Post. Now their copy is waiting, and they are sure it is the latest edition, containing the very latest news available, in addition to their favorite features.

LAKE COUNTY HAS HAD TWO HANGINGS

ONE IN 1865; OTHER, 1872

Sentencing of Two at Once Last Week Is First Time Double Murder Penalty Fixed in County Record

Providing the death penalty is inflicted in the case of John Brown and Dominick Bresette, found guilty last week of the murder of William Beck, a Lake county farmer, it will be the fourth time in the history of this county that the extreme punishment for murder will have been meted out.

Between the years 1865 and 1922 three murderers were sentenced to hang by Lake county juries. Two of them were hanged while the third, Ignatz Potz was saved by Governor Len Small, who granted a reprieve a few hours before the execution was scheduled to take place, and then later commuted the sentence. Potz's commuted sentence will expire in 1930.

First Hanging in 1865

The first hanging victim in Lake county was William Bell, who lived near Lake Zurich. The late State's Attorney Charles H. Reed prosecuted Bell for the murder of Mrs. Briden, who also lived in the vicinity of Lake Zurich. He was found guilty of murder by a Circuit court jury in January of 1865 and his punishment fixed at death. In January 19, motion for a new trial was overruled and the execution set for Friday, June 13. Records in the office of Circuit Clerk Lyman J. Wilmot show that the late Sheriff O. H. Heath carried out the execution of Bell on that date.

Bell kept company with a daughter of Mrs. Briden. He wanted to marry the girl but her mother refused to consent to the marriage so he was rejected by the girl whom he loved. Mrs. Briden kept a large sum of money secreted in her home and after Bell had been turned down, the Briden home was robbed. Mrs. Briden accused Bell of stealing the money.

The theory of the state was that Bell was angry at the woman for not allowing him to marry her daughter and that he also had robbed the Briden home and was afraid of being arrested on this charge. An axe was used to crush the skull of the woman and then her throat was cut with a razor.

When asked by the sheriff if he had any statement to make, as he was brought on the scaffold, Bell said he wanted to say for the last time that an innocent man was being killed.

Two years after the hanging, according to County Recorder L. O. Brockway, two boys who were picking up hickory nuts in a wooded section a short distance from the scene of the murder found a cap containing a roll of paper money. It was presumed that this was the loot taken from the Briden home by Bell.

Rafferty Hanged

The second man hanged in Lake county was Chris Rafferty of Chicago. While serving a life sentence in Joliet penitentiary, Rafferty murdered his cellmate, also a Chicagoan. The case came to this county on a change of venue from Joliet. The late State's Attorney Reed also prosecuted Rafferty.

On December 3, 1872, Rafferty was sentenced to hang and was executed on March 7, 1873.

SPECIAL N. S. LINE OPERA SERVICE GIVEN

Opera devotees of Milwaukee, Racine, Kenosha, Waukegan and other north shore communities journeying to Chicago to attend performances of the Chicago Civic Opera during the current season, starting October 31, will be afforded special travel accommodations by the Chicago North Shore and Milwaukee Railroad (North Shore Line), it is announced by R. S. Amis, General Passenger Agent.

From 7 to 8:30 p. m., each evening during the opera season, all southbound North Shore Line trains will make a special stop at Congress street "L" station, only a few steps from the main entrance to the auditorium. From 10 to 12 p. m., all northbound trains will stop at Congress street. This will give north shore residents service almost to the door of the auditorium in going both to and from the opera. The special stop will be made by trains operating over both the Skokie Valley and Shore Line routes, as well as those in the Libertyville-Mundelein service.

The boys are urged to appreciate what education has done for them, and they say they never would have learned to play football if they hadn't had it.
