USE OF RYTHM IN TEACHING THE DUMB

HELPS THEM TO SPEAK

Experiments in State Institution Proves Efficaey of This System; How It Is Done

Teaching the totally deaf and dumb to speak and even to sing as naturally as do people with normal sense is one of the things accomplished by modern scientific methods at the Illinois School for the Deaf, Jacksonville. Through the use of rhythm, the clumsy sign language is done away with and people once regared as hopelessly incapable of speech know the thrill of normal expression.

A piano, a large bass drum and the human voice are used in these rhyhm classes which constitute the first step in educating the deaf and dumb. The class includes the totally deaf and dumb and also those with some residuum of hearing and some ability to speak but with the defective, unintelligible voice once thought to be the inevitable accompaniment of faulty hearing.

How Operated

The child stands by the piano or drum, placing his fingertips lightly on the instrument. Chords are played on the piano or simple rhythms beat on the drum. The vibrations are communicated to the child, awakening in him a sense of time and tone. Accented and unaccented chords convey to him an idea of the normal inflections of the voice. High and low tones teach him to raise or lower his own voice, avoiding the monotone that usually characterizes the speech of the deaf.

After this preliminary lesson in pitch, the class works for absolute pitch. The deaf child's voice is placed on B flat below middle C as that is the natural speaking tone. Care is taken to secure forward production, control of the over-tones and nasal resonance so that the voice will have a pleasant quality and good carrying

Correct Accent, Also

The piano and the drum are also used for giving correct accent and are supplemented in these lessons by physical exercises in which the entire body is made to express the rhythm of the music. In the few years since this system has been in operation, pupils at the Illinois school have made wonderful progress in learning to speak and the method has been hailed as a revolutionary one in the education of children handicapped by poor speech and hearing. The operation of this rhythm method of teaching was demonstrated at the Illinois Conference on Public Welfare at Quincy, September 24-28, where all phases of State welfare work as well as many private philan-
