

NAVY SHOULD BE KEPT EFFICIENT

DESPITE KELLOGG GESTURE

We Are Not Yet Near Millenium, and While Pacifists Crow, Big Stick Is Still Best Defense

"Fears are being expressed," says the Philadelphia Public Ledger, "that the pact of Paris negotiated by Secretary Kellogg may lull the people of the United States into a false sense of security and give to pacifism too strong a hold upon the national life. This is of course a danger which must be watchfully guarded against. After every war the United States has lapsed into a state of unpreparedness for eventualities. The new treaty does not mean the end of all wars. This should be obvious. It does not mean the end of anything. It is, in fact, a beginning. It points toward a changed world viewpoint, toward an alternation of diplomacy and the processes of international politics. But these changes lie in the future. It is only by constant constructive thought and action that they can be brought about. The treaty gives impetus to this thought and a basis for action. Only eternal vigilance will insure that it shall not be distorted into meaning what it does not mean."

Food for Thought

There is food for much thought in this paragraph. We are all hoping that the Kellogg treaty will be a beginning of a new war will not of course be impossible but at least less respectful. But, says the National Republic, it is obvious that we are entering an era of international experimentation. We do not know how the powers of the world are going to act under the new agreement. We hope for the best but we cannot be sure. In the mean time it would be the height of national folly for Uncle Sam to neglect his legitimate defenses, and of course his biggest defense at this time is his navy.

Such neglect would be especially foolish in view of the fact that other nations of the world are continuing to build warships and to plan new ones. In some instances their actions have given rise to the surmise that their intentions are not exactly friendly to the United States. It is therefore logical that, until further agreements by the powers of the world, Uncle Sam must watch his step in a naval way.

Is Encouraging

It is of course encouraging to know that President Coolidge realizes the facts herein stated, and is of the opinion that despite the Kellogg pact we must not neglect our navy. It is said that the administration will insist that the arms policy of the government stand and that there be no cut in the naval program.

When Congress meets again the fight will be on. The pacifists won a temporary success in the last session when they succeeded in preventing action on the cruiser program. They will swarm down on Congress again in greater numbers than ever with their propaganda factories working night and day. They will be flushed and encouraged by their former victories and will use the Kellogg treaty as a further excuse as to why we ought to quit building cruisers. But the real statesmen of the nation, whether they be Republicans or Democrats, will not be followed by the noise, and it is up to the people of the United States to give their support to the congressmen who realize the needs of our country in a naval way. This is not imperialism but common sense.

ACHIEVES TRIUMPH IN CABINET MAKING

With Ordinary Tools Carpenter Makes Inlaid Table of Notable Beauty

Using his wife's kitchen utensils, his own carpenter tools, and other homely objects about his house as models, Charles Ulrich, a cabinet maker of Orchard Park, N. Y., after eleven years has achieved a triumph in his art, according to the American Magazine.

His masterpiece is an elaborate table containing fifteen thousand pieces of wood of twelve varieties. He started it when his employer gave him a handsome slab of unfinished wood years ago. "I thought I'd put a stripe around and it might make a nice table top," he said. Then he added another strip and fashioned inlaid legs for it. From time to time he picked up waste bits of finer woods, always with the idea of adding to the table, which he loves as Manon loved the one she wept for in the opera.

At first Ulrich fashioned a checker-board in the center of the table and then put flags in the corners. "After that," he said, "I just put in the things I knew about. I put my wife's cooking utensils in, the potato masher, rolling pin and all that. Then I've set all my carpenter's tools into it. That saw was hard to cut out and lay in." He also has all the card emblems, clover, peach and apple leaves, a crescent moon and the outline of an old shoe. Scores of people have visited his house to view the unique product of his craft, but they are promptly informed there is no price on it.

Oh Yes

This is a tale unfortunate Of a freshman quite antique Who came up here to educate Himself.

Trying to sophisticate He soon began to dissipate Thus quickly did evaporate His self.

Lessons he did procrastinate; Exams he could not penetrate, Then Mister Dean did nominate The shelf.

Polan Banks.

"I can't imagine what we ever got married for; we're totally different in every way."

"Oh, you flatterer!"

"The storm burst so suddenly upon us that we had no warning of its approach," remarked the globe-trotter, to a group of interested friends at the club.

Workman (to mate, who has fallen down deep well): "You stop where you are, Bill. I'll run an' fetch a rope!"
