STEAM HEAT FOR HIGHWAYS, PLAN

TO MELT SNOW, PURPOSE

Experiment to Be Made in Nevada, Is Report; Plan to Use Boiler in Effort to Keep Road Clear

"Steam heated highways may greet the traveler in the west, if plans made by California and Nevada highway officials are carried out," says a bulletin received by the touring bureau of the Chicago Motor club.

Plans have been practically completed to experiment next winter in heating a four-mile stretch of the Victory highway with steam pipes to determine whether it is practical to attempt to keep Sierra passes open during the winters by this method.

Preparations Started

Highway commissioner J. C. Durham, of Washoe county, Nevada, says that a 200-horse power boiler has been purchased and will be installed near the Southern Pacific railway tracks. It will be fired with fuel oil obtained from tank cars on a siding.

Three lines of two-inch pipe provided with steam traps at 500-foot intervals will be placed below the surface of the highway for four miles. They will be buried in silicon, a heat insulator, six inches below the ground, with the insulation forcing heat to the surface and preventing its dissipation through the ground. Steam will be kept in the pipes during cold weather, and the boiler maintained at top pressure during a snowstorm. It is proposed to have the road warm when a storm is approaching, in the hope that the snow will melt as soon as it falls.

May Be Others

If the plan is feasible, it is said that California and Nevada will provide funds for heating 16 miles of the highway. It is claimed by Nevada road engineers that only that strip of the route through the Sierras prevents maintenance of an open road throughout the winter.

PERFUME SKIN INSTEAD OF CLOTHING, IS ADVICE

Writer on Woman's Fads Says Reaction Is Improved By This Method

Perfumed skins instead of perfumed clothes is becoming more and more the vogue in the United States, and promises to become even more popular, according to a writer on women's interests in Farm and Fireside.

Advising women to choose the more expensive types of perfume, even if this necessitates purchasing smaller quantities, the writer points out that in the case of perfume the rule of quality rather than quantity is most important. In addition, she says, it is wise to get small quantities as the odor sometimes becomes stale with age. The atomizer is suggested as best in using perfume, both for economy and to distribute the scent.

For persons who dislike a lasting perfume, scented soaps and bath salts provide a refreshing way of enjoying the scent without having it with one indefinitely.

Women who like perfumes are urged to think of those around them as well as their own tastes. Most persons are said to prefer flowery odors such as lilac, violet and jasmine instead of heavy odors such as ambre and chypre. These latter kinds should be used very lightly, the writer declares.

"Perfume is designed to react to the skin and not to cloth," says the article.

ELEVATED HIGHWAY IS IN PROSPECT, BELIEF

Traffic Engineers Consider Its Advantages; Predict Use in the Future

Serious thought has been given the elevated highway by traffic engineers within the past few weeks, according to a bulletin just issued by the Automobile Club of Illinois. "The road widening program as contemplated might well answer the solution of solving the traffic problem in the majority of instances, but it remains for the overhead system of highway to actually eliminate the dangers of crossings as well as hazardous spots," declares Si Mayer, president of the club. "We are more and more inclined to accept the elevated highway as the ultimate solution in the elimination of these dangers.

Widening of roads, it must be admitted, attracts a greater volume, thereby causing opportunity for more accidents, especially at crossings. With roads elevated these crossings are eliminated and greater speed can be attained without additional hazards.

Children have less chance of getting onto the right-of-way, and it also serve as an injunction against jay-walking. This is the only safe road to build, and the time is not far distant when this form of vehicular roadway will become as popular as the automobile is today.
