Sunday School Lesson and Church Announcements

International Sunday School Lesson for December 23 II Timothy 4:1-5, 16-18 Luke 2:8-20 Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

If the entire time is given to the Christmas Lesson the closing subject in the Life of Paul should be considered in connection with the Review next Sunday.

After about two years Paul was released from the first Roman imprisonment. It may have been because the accusers in Jerusalem, knowing what a poor case they would have in the Emperor's court, decided not to appear against the man they had already heckled for two years during his confinement in Caesarea. From I Timothy and Titus, which were written during the free time, and from traditions that are well established it appears that Paul did considerable journeying, going as far east as Spain and westward to Asia Minor again. Then came the second arrest, probably in the region of Macedonia. On reaching Rome the prisoner was placed in the Mamertine prison. The traveler is shown a reputed cell close to the Forum. It is underground, dark and cold.

Tradition says that Paul went Home as the sword of the executioner severed the head somewhere on the Ostian Bay, about three miles outside of Rome.

Heaven and earth are closely related. It was while shepherds were caring for their flocks just outside Bethlehem that the most glorious song of all time had its first rendition for their benefit. The recitative was given by an angel who bade them "Fear not" and supported the command by announcing that the night of waiting for the promised Messiah was over, for their Saviour had been born in Bethlehem. Instead of a Deliverer who would come forth in fullness of strength they would find a Babe, who was the Christ Child. Meanwhile the fields were all radiant with a Shekinah glory.

Then the heavenly choir burst forth into the "Gloria in Excelsis." They began by praising "God in the highest," which is always the right way of approaching the Throne. The Pronouncement was a declaration of "peace on earth, good will to men." Though He was King of Kings He came to establish peace, first between man and the Father, and then between all mankind.

Wisely the shepherds, as by common agreement, said "Let us go to Bethlehem and see this thing that has come to pass." There they found Him cradled in a manger Who, through Very God, had in the incarnation been born of the Virgin. The shepherds became the first evangelists and went forth to tell this good news. We too must listen to learn, come and see, and then tell the world of the Gift of God and the love of Jesus. May Christmas be merry indeed for you in Christ!
