Muzzling of Dogs Is Discussed in Letter

The following letter is self-explanatory: Editor Highland Park Press:

Such a hue and cry has gone up over the ordinance to muzzle dogs, on the ground of its torture and inhumanity to the animal, that it seems all thoughtful dog owners should get together and attempt to meet the rabies situation in a safe and sane way. Even the people who object to muzzles, I might more forcibly say especially those who object to muzzles would go to great lengths to aid a movement to curb and eventually wipe out this dreaded menace. A muzzle, after all, is only a gesture. Most dogs are able, in the frantic efforts to rid themselves of their object of torture, to so far free their mouth that a muzzle becomes no more than an ungainly appendage about the neck! And where the muzzle is so tight that the dog cannot so free his mouth many a case of madness has resulted, due to the fact that he could neither drink water nor open his mouth wide enough to produce proper perspiration (a dog perspires through his tongue) during excessive heat.

There is, however, a sure rabies preventative—just as sure for dogs as small-pox vaccine is for people. It is the "Rabies Vaccine" and can be administered in one treatment by and veterinary, at a cost very little higher than a good muzzle. It is effective for a year, and aside from its benefit to the dog, is the only guarantee against the spread of rabies, and the only sure protection for our children in case of bite. This inoculation by vaccine is enforced by law, with great success, in many cities today.

Of course there are always objectors to everything, and there may be people who would not consider vaccine for dogs. But, couldn't there be a readjustment of the law, whereby all could be satisfied? Couldn't the present ordinance be amended so as to allow those of us who are too humane to muzzle our dogs to use the vaccine instead? A vaccinated dog to wear a large, colored, tag carrying his vaccination number.

If there are people in this community, (and I am confident there are) who feel as I do, or who have better suggestions to make, I would be most interested to hear from them; and perhaps, if we form a large enough group we might be able to accomplish something by taking up this matter, in a body, with proper authorities.

Signed
Erna Mowbray.

Round her eyes her tresses fell,
Which were blackest, none could tell.

—Thomas Hood

Whether it be an expression of the new femininity or merely another caprice of fashion is a matter still to be determined—but certainly no up-to-the-minute woman will deny the new trend toward curls and lustre, softness and charm.

The style in hair cuts has changed overnight, without so much as a courteous warning so that sheared tresses might first be coaxed into the extra four inches which would elevate the coiffure to "le dernier cri."

If you are so fortunate as to have a very rapid hair growth, you will find little to worry about in the new demand of style. If, however, you are like the average woman who struggles fruitlessly with short ends all through the painful "evolution" process, the little hints I shall give here will help you tremendously in achieving the effect of a shoulder bob, even though the bob itself has not grown to the correct proportions.

First let me warn you that while shingles and sleek boyish bobs have passed into history, you must bear in mind the importance of fitting the style to your individuality. I need not assure you that if the boyish bob is "made" for your particular type, don't for one moment consider changing your hair dress. After all, the effect you wish to achieve is beauty, and the roads to beauty are legion!

However—to return to the shoulder or the "half-way bob" as smart beauticians call it—the simplest way to stimulate it is by advising your barber to leave the sides of your hair severely alone. And here let me warn you! Don't make the mistake of neglecting your regular hair cut. Your head must be neat and trim every moment of the growing out period—although I admit that that is a thing far more easily said than done.

The hair can be carefully, neatly clipped, and the neck kept free from the little bristly hairs which are anything but attractive. But ask your barber not to touch the upper layer of back hair which has probably been shingled to inch length uneven whisks. Keep away from points on the neck and realize that a hair cut now is merely for the purpose of keeping your hair line tidy while you cultivate new growth.

Study your type and study the new clothes. Clothes, you know, are very important in dictating our hair modes.
