

Burial Saturday Is Seven Hundredth in North Shore Cemetery

On Saturday the remains of Frank Kvedor, the man who was found in a dying condition at the foot of a stairway in North Chicago, last week were interred in North Shore cemetery. From the standpoint of the cemetery the notable feature of that funeral was the fact that it was the and largely responsible for all that has been done to make this place a notable asset of our great North Shore residential area. The farm which Mr. Western bought in 1916 was known for many years as a very poor farm. The Green Bay road cuts about eight acres off from the southwest corner in the form of a triangle, and this road is on the ridge which forms the divide between the Mississippi and St. Lawrence river basins that farm. Many people thought he was probably an inexperienced man from the city and unhesitatingly asserted, "that man never can make a cemetery on that farm." Repetition of such statements came from various sources. However, the founder demonstrated that he could make a growth of trees and shrubs and flowers that is almost tropical in its luxurians right on that "poor farm."

With 700 interments it is fair to assume that from 2800 to 3000 people are directly concerned in North Shore cemetery by virtue of the fact that their dead have found their last resting place within its limits. With nearly 1500 additional lots sold to other people in advance of needs, it is demonstrated that from 6000 to 8000 citizens are personally interested in what is fast becoming purely a notable community asset. When the lots are all sold the entire property will practically belong to the public. The cemetery is rapidly becoming an arboretum as it now has upwards of eighty varieties of trees and as many varieties of shrubs. Mr. Western is now about to plant four varieties of Magnolias and many other varieties of trees and shrubs heretofore untried in his big landscape garden. Hence, when the spring planting is done there will be more than one hundred varieties each of trees and shrubs.

It is gratifying to all lot owners and citizens generally that a fund of $7000 per acre is being accumulated with a Trust company, the income of which will be available for all time to come to keep the place ever beautiful and to protect it against all encroachments.

Criminal Docket in County Court Large

It was announced last Thursday by State's Attorney Smith that the next criminal call in the County court would start Tuesday of this week. Among the cases scheduled for the week is that of Rose Orlandini and Frank Barkus et al., charged with violation of the prohibition laws.

Charges listed include drunk and driving, wife abandonment, child abandonment, confidence games, issuing worthless checks, and assault. The call is one of the largest being listed.

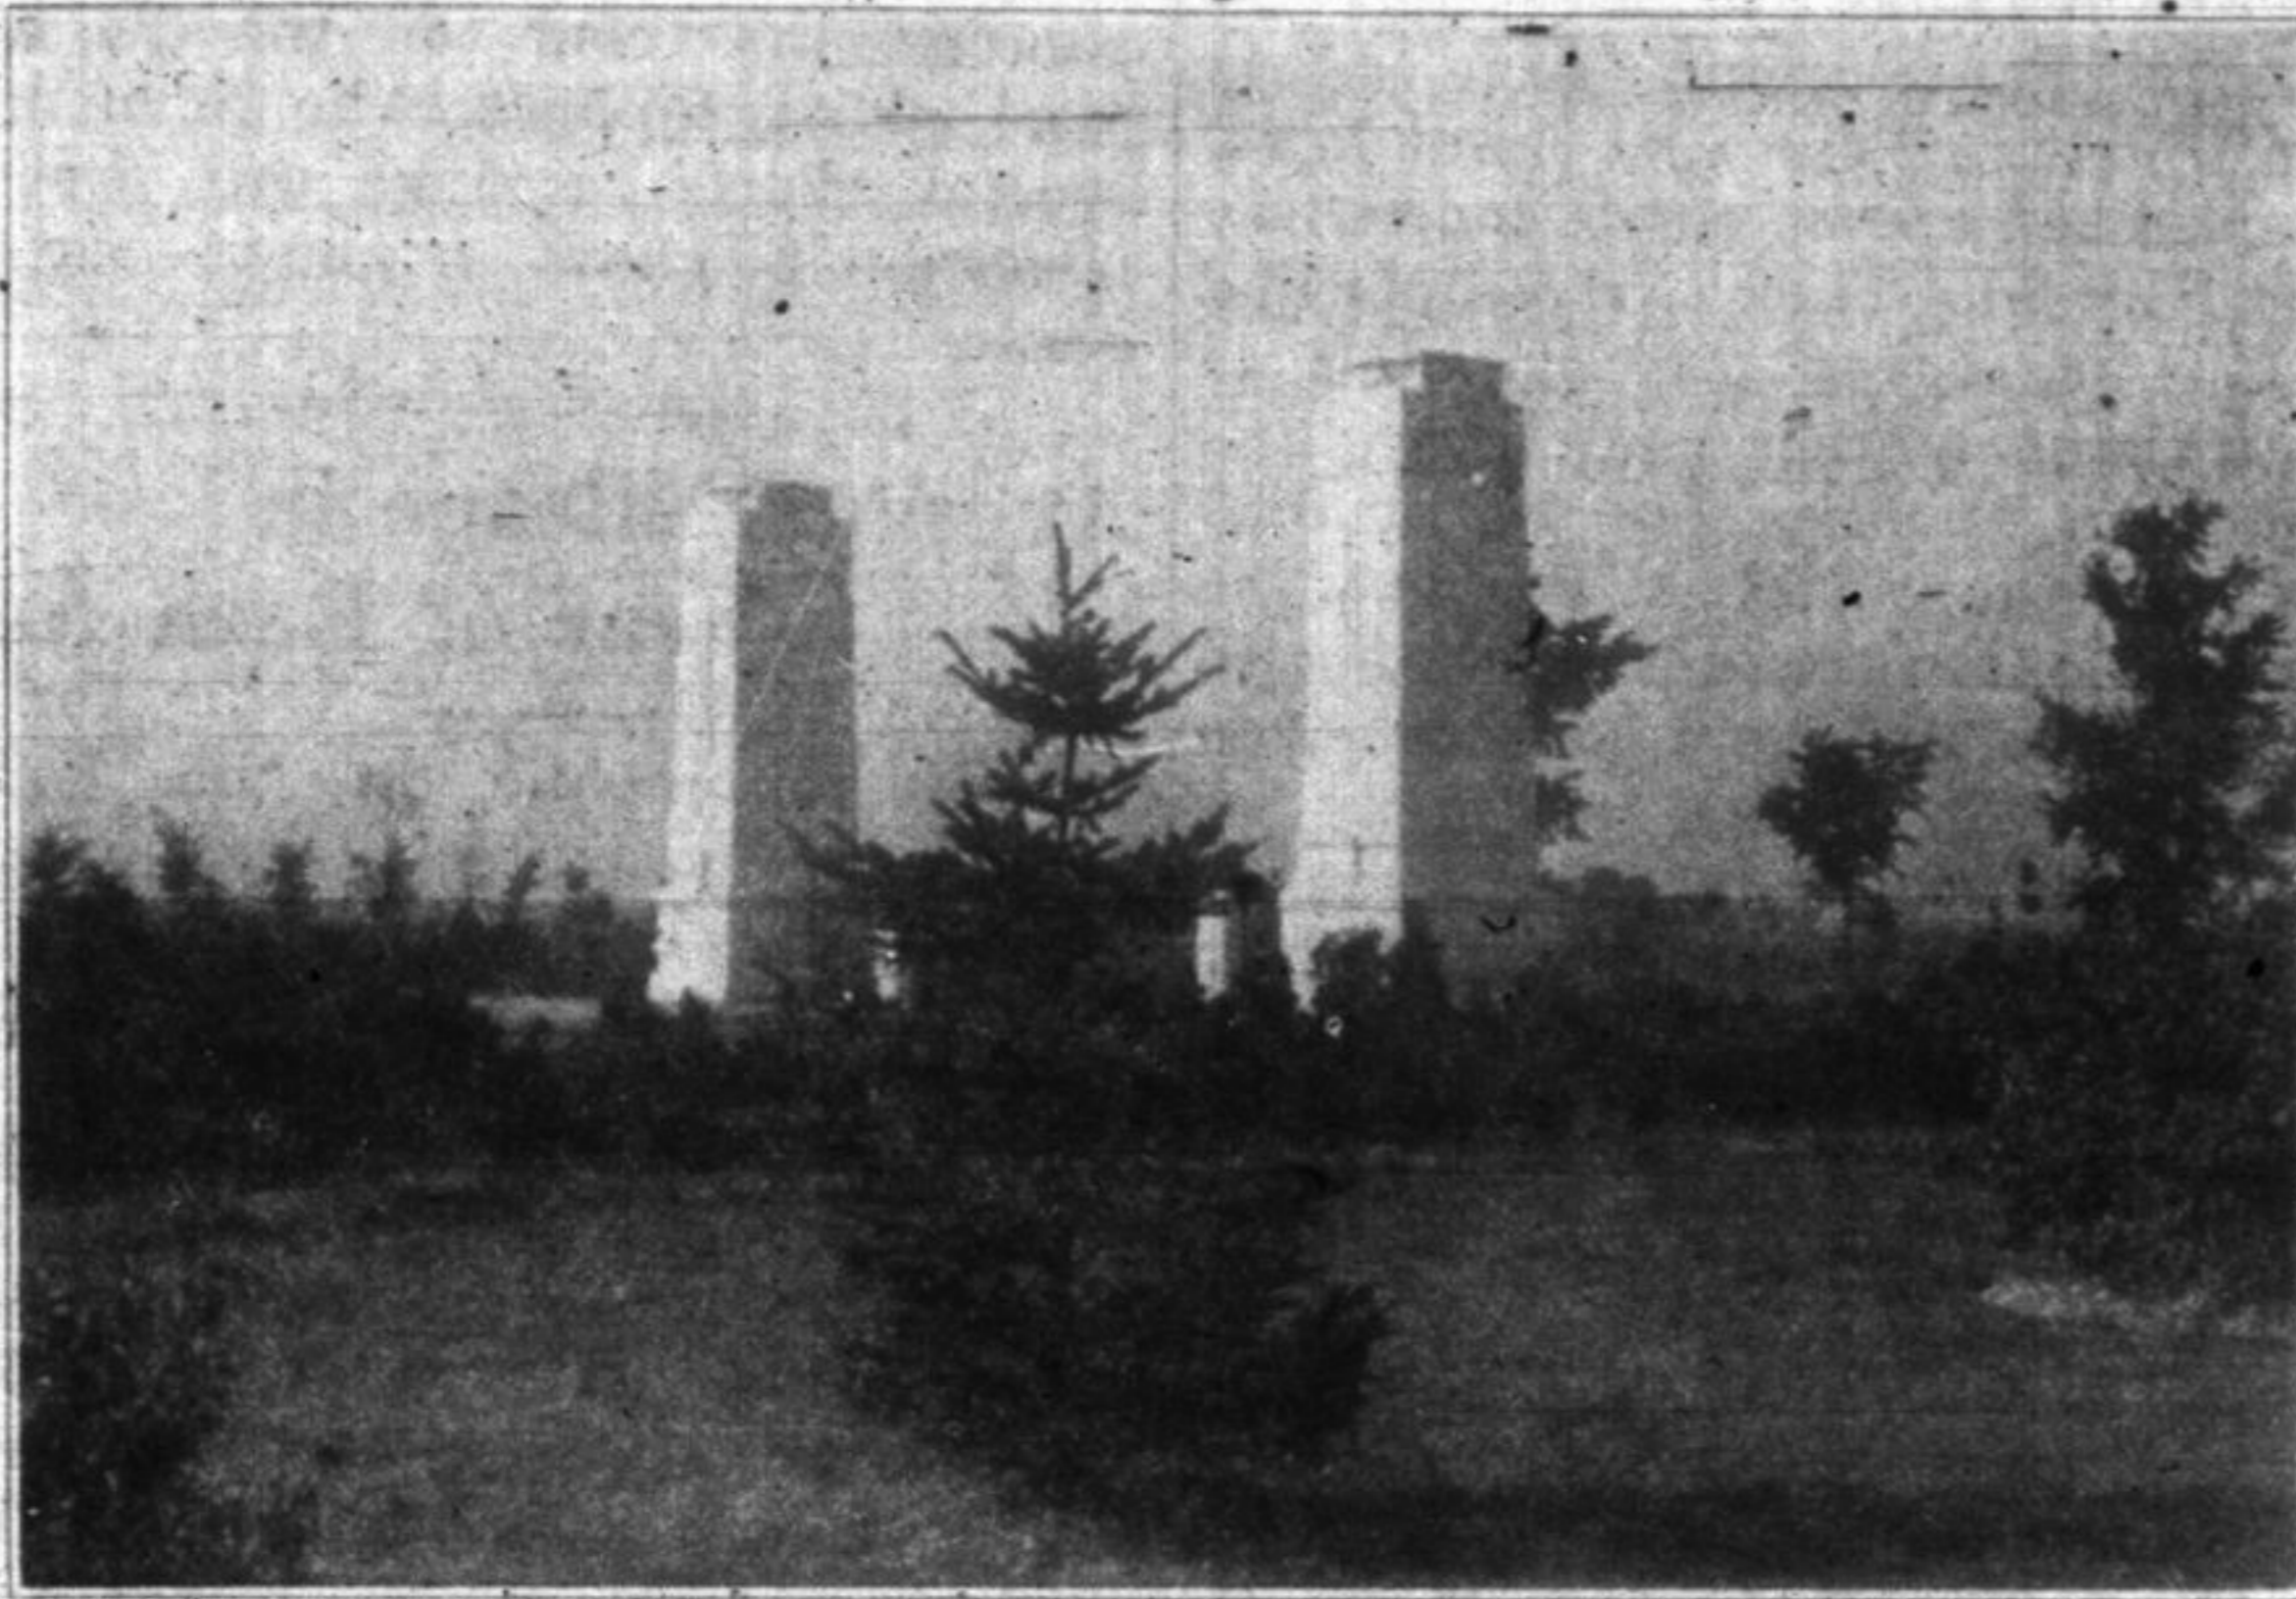

The names of the defendants follow: Vahren Tashjian, Jacob Grahek, Frank Kasper, Frank Barkus, et al, Rose Orlandini, H. W. Ames, John Lawler, Arthur Adams, August Deinlein, Walter Lee, Philip Kulefsky, Graydon Hammend, William Young, Irving Ryan, Mabel C. Shaw, D. C. Donoghue, John Poulton, Fred Woodward, Frank J. Fitzgerald, John Doe otherwise known as Mrs. Pollen Chcoucky.

Builders Meet Tonight

A special meeting of Deerfield-Shields Chapter Order of Builders will be held in A. Q. Fay Lodge Hall, Masonic temple on Thursday evening, (Tonight) at 7:30, for the conferring of the Builder degree.

All Master Masons are cordially invited to attend this ceremonial.

People complain that they are suffering from spring fever, which in former days was usually called just plain laziness.

Beautiful Entrance — North Shore Cemetery

700th interment in what is now said to be, by many well traveled people, the finest place of human interment in the United States. Twelve years ago the first of next month, ground was broken in the development work by John Western, who has ever since been at the head of the corporation at that point. The greenhouse range is on that triangle.

Many amusing stories have come to Mr. Western during the intervening twelve years concerning what was said of him when the local newspapers published the statement that he was about to make a cemetery on

Assessment
Brown moved that the corporation be authorized to present said petition to the county court for approval. The assessment levied on the NE 1/4 of section 27, 43, 12 lying to & North Western right-of-way for a reinforced concrete Highland Park Warrant No. 333, that the corporation be authorized to present said petition to the county court for approval prevailed.

Night

Arrived April 24

bor camp of Highland a Past Oracle's meeting, April 24th. The delegates from Deerfield met for the purpose of filling the office of Mrs. Ada Juhrendt, Fred Meyer as secretary and Wm. Johnston as

Cordial invitation to Our Nursery

to our nursery much to inter- perhaps you will on as to just you need to ds more beau- l.

l see the fine, fruit and orna- the beautiful ers and other You'll enjoy your visit.

Fiore
eries

ts in GARDENING

Highwood, Ill. and Park 523

Ideal Location for Automobile Show Room and Service Station

Can arrange for large space, also for business of any kind

SECOND STREET, 100 Feet from Central

Will Remodel or Build to Suit Tenant

ROSENTHAL, MAYER & LEWIS

77 West Washington Street, Chicago

Telephone State 8884