

Hints for the Home

If you are following the vogue for papered walls and redecorating in this medium—be sure to study the effect carefully before picking out curtain materials—and choose something that fits into the picture.

Do not let the draperies strike a harsh color note that will either overbalance the color in the rest of the room or be too sharp in contrast with it. Two or three harmonizing colors, or a plain tone shading softly into an important color found in the paper usually make the curtains part of the wall scheme.

With striped or two-toned papers gay floral chintzes and linens are good—almost necessary to give the room variety and warmth of color.

In a combination of patterns, two of the same kind should not be used together so that both struggle for supremacy. That is to say—if the paper is scenic, a similar subject in drapery fabric would not be harmonious, while a linen in a diagonal pattern in related colors would be excellent.
