

MOVE TO COLLECT FROM KANSAS BANK

Effort Being Made to Recover the $100,000 Deposited in That City

First step in an effort to collect the $100,000 in Lake county money sent to the First National bank of Eureka, Kan., several years ago by Roy Bracher, then treasurer, is to be made this week, it is reported from Waukegan, through the sending of the certificate of deposit for $100,000 to the bank for collection.

Ira Pearsall, who served as treasurer during a part of the time that the money was on deposit there, refused to sign the certificate which was turned over to him originally by Bracher and then later turned back by him to Bracher.

Bracher signed as "LeRoy Bracher, treasurer, successor to Ira Pearsall, treasurer."

The certificate will be sent through as a regular collection under the plans considered now.

Juggling Deposit Amounts

After the Kansas bank shut its doors and reorganized all within a few hours and then resumed business it frightened Bracher and Pearsall, who later discovered that the, old cashier, Clark C. Nye, had entered the $100,000 as a $10 deposit rather than for the full amount and then sent out the certificate showing the full $100,000.

Bracher resigned as treasurer and turned all of his property over to three trustees to liquidate so as to pay up note signers who had given him $2.00 each to replenish the shortage in the treasury.

About 10 per cent of the indebtedness has been retired and a subdivision at Diamond Lake still remains to be sold. The trustees held the certificate but as it was not endorsed by Pearsall they were hesitant in trying to collect on it.

Bracher's signature, they believe will remove any controversy.
