

A Narrow Escape

A YOUNG MAN and his wife went to a store to purchase a stove. They agreed to pay $40 in three payments.

He paid $13.50 at once. A month later he gave another check of the same amount to finish the balance. The store was not satisfied and called upon for $26.50 instead of only $13.50. He denied the second payment.

The young man went home and hunted up the two canceled checks. The store was easily convinced that it was their error. They had failed to give credit.

Such mistakes do happen but the men who pay by check can usually escape the penalty of paying a debt twice.

It's the safe and easy system.
