LATER EXPERIENCES OF JEREMIAH

Jeremiah 38:4-13

—Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

The conquering army of the Chaldeans was all about Jerusalem. Already some of Judah had been deported to Babylon. Zedekiah had been appointed king by Nebuchadnezzar but failed in his loyalty to that mighty chieftain. Soon Jerusalem fell and Zedekiah was taken to Babylon, but he never saw that city as he was blinded after being forced to witness the killing of his own sons.

Jeremiah's voice did not meet with approval for he had predicted such an overthrow of the nation if they would not reform and live righteously. When the inevitable was at hand the prophet advised ready submission to Nebuchadnezzar. In short, it was to their interest to make the very most of a bad situation. One thing in particular was commanded and it was to avoid any effort to win out through an alliance with Egypt. Zedekiah did the very opposite. When the army of Egypt approached to aid Jerusalem Nebuchadnezzar raised the siege to overcome the new enemy.

The lull in attack furnished opportunity for Jeremiah to start out for his home town, Anathoth. Then the loud talking Pashur cried "Treason" and declared that Jeremiah was deserting to the Chaldeans. For this, ready permission was obtained from Zedekiah to cast him into a dungeon. The bottom was a mass of mire into which the prophet sank, and with no concern to the captors. Any spot can be made a place of prayer and now Jeremiah just continues to seek spiritual strength from the ever present Jehovah.

Ebed-melech was the hero of the hour. He was just a eunuch and a negro from Ethiopia but he had a heart equal to the best in any race. He made Jeremiah's misery his own concern and hastened to obtain relief. The king was importuned. Doubtless the worthy character of Jeremiah was reviewed and his past fidelity called to mind. This time the king acts more worthily than when he yielded to the princes who sought Jeremiah's hurt. "Take thirty men with thee," was his command. There must be guard enough to withstand any effort to the contrary that might be made by these princes.

The way in which even a good deed is done is worthy of notice. Ebed-melech is most thoughtful. The old man in the pit is weak from his sufferings and the ropes used to lift him out would gall under the arm pits. So this Ethiopian carefully lowers some old "rags and worn out garments" to the very faithful prophet. He does not even throw them down lest they be soiled by the mire that was all about. With all the gentleness possible Jeremiah was brought to the surface and accorded better treatment. Just a little careful observation will do away with all race prejudice. When we begin to look for the good in others we cannot fail to see their excellencies, and these often put us to shame by comparison. Ebed-melech outdid king Zedekiah.

ligious Education committee meeting in the parish house; 7:15 — Young People's society meeting. Election of conference delegates. Leader to be announced later.

Highland Park Methodist Church

North avenue at Lauretta place Last Sunday's memorial service was a very pleasing one and well attended considering the warm weather.
The church was prettily decorated with flowers. A vocal solo by Captain Pickens of Ft. Sheridan and a trombone solo by Max Hauger were much enjoyed. At the conclusion, while the audience stood at silence for a moment, "taps" were sounded by Mr. Hauger from an adjacent room with impressive effect. The pastor's sermon stressed the commemoration of the lives of the soldiers and sailors of the cross, who have penetrated to the corners of the earth in carrying the gospel to distant lands, thousands of them sacrificing their lives to this duty. In speaking of the lives given for our country he asked, "Why should not every community have in its school houses and other public places tablets commemorating civic services of those citizens who have been outstanding characters and whose example could most worthily emulate by the coming generations? Many a man and woman have made distinctive contributions of splendid service and effort for the good of their community who
