Jingle Bells

it was beautiful. A group of fir trees over at the right with branches borne down with a tremendous load of white was a graceful picture.

"Come on," yelled Hemmingway, half way down the hill. "We have to catch that train!"

I wrenched myself away from my contemplation of the beauties of nature and considered the matter of progressing further. I started to walk after him. Soon I was relieved of the necessity of effort. The gentle grade was enough to cause me to slide over the surface of the snow.

It was an exhilarating sensation and very restful. I was suddenly glad that I had skis instead of snowshoes. I had been envying Hemmingway the superior traveling qualities of his equipment, but now I could see that the advantage was going to be all my way. While he walked down the hills I would be sliding gracefully and resting myself from the climb up the next one.

Wrapped in pleasant introspection I had scarcely noticed that my speed was increasing a little. Now a slight difficulty in balancing called my attention to it.

I leaned forward a trifle to restore my equilibrium. As I did so I heard a sharp swishing sound as the runners glided swiftly over the snow.

The speed increased. I looked about for some way of slowing up. There seemed to be no brake. It appeared inadvisable to turn sideways as one does on skates in order to stop. Even as I thought, my pace accelerated to such a degree that I abandoned all idea of doing anything but pray.

Directly in my path, proceeding slowly down the hillside, was John Hemmingway. Headed as I was I could not fail to strike him. I tried to steer in some other direction. It was no use. I flew toward him as a filing to a magnet.

He was blithely unconscious that I was overtaking him. He is a large man and so am I. The result of an impact was terrible to contemplate.

I tried to cry out to him, but my voice left my dry throat as only a harsh cackle. The only word I could think of was "Fore!"

Intuition made him turn around. He must have read in my eyes that I had lost control because he started to scramble hastily out of my way.

Horror of horrors, my runners, which had hitherto glided straight, as if on rails, now swerved sharply to one side in the direction which he was going!

He saw it and redoubled his efforts to get out of range. With fiendish perversity the skis turned also. I was almost upon him! He made a supreme effort—and stumbled. I shut my eyes.
