Interesting Happenings About This Part of North Shore; County Seat

Miss Isabelle Donnelly, who had made her home with her sister, Mrs. J. C. Foley, of 523 Washington street, Waukegan, for the last few years, died today after a long illness.

Struck by a baseball batted from a field near the highway along which she was driving, near Lake Villa, which entered through the window of the automobile, Mrs. A. J. Johnson of 3856 Wabansia avenue, Chicago, was knocked unconscious and suffered a badly bruised and discolored eye.

Jay Frudy, 64 years old, passed away Thursday evening at his home in Libertyville after an illness of three weeks. Death was due to heart disease, complicated by uremic poisoning.

At the organization meeting of the Libertyville-Mundelein Chamber of Commerce, held last week, R. J. Lyons of Mundelein was chosen by the directors to head the organization for the coming year.

Mrs. Emilie W. Peacock, widow of Charles D. Peacock, Jr., son of the founder of the Chicago jewelry company, died recently at her country home in Lake Villa, Ill., after an illness of several months. She was 55 years old.

Mrs. Jud Ames of Libertyville, who had lived in Fremont township for many years, was found dead in bed last Thursday in her home in Libertyville. She was more than 70 years old, Coroner J. L. Taylor said.

Concluding that the cause of the accident had been unknown, a coroner's jury in Zion Saturday found that Elmer E. Hobbs and Clarence Bradshaw, both of Zion, had come to their death from injuries sustained when their plane crashed a few weeks ago near the Waukegan airport.

LaVerne Wheelock of Wauconda was badly cut about the face and eye last week when a bottle, said to have contained near beer, exploded in her face. Particles of glass were taken from her face and near the eye and ten stitches were taken in the infected.
