

Max Schmeling

Chicago fight partisans will get their first look at fistiana's latest sensation, Max Schmeling, Wednesday, July 24, when the German heavyweight champion shows at the Chicago Stadium, headlining a card comprised entirely of heavyweights.

"The German Jack Dempsey," as Schmeling is correctly dubbed, has revived the interest in the heavyweight division as a result of his sensational knockout of Johnny Risko and his decisive victory over Paulino Zzudun, placing himself in number one position of the ranking heavies by virtues of these wins.

LOCAL ARCHITECT IS FIRST PRIZE WINNER

cial needs of the owners and the character of the site were carefully considered. The result, a house, comparatively inexpensive, whose low white walls and gray green roof seem as indigenous to the Ravinia soil as the oak trees which surround it.

Construction

The exterior walls are of common brick exposed on the inside of the house without furring or plaster and painted white with cement paint. Insulation is obtained by an air space in the wall, the walls having been laid according to the "Ideal" method.

In the first floor interior, the outer walls are brick, painted white, and partitions are in general sheathed with vertical boards of knotty spruce, random width, stained walnut brown. The living room floor is wide oak boards, and the ceiling is exposed joists and boards.

The white masonry walls of the interior and the dark stained ceiling of wood boards and exposed beams produces an effect reminiscent of old world cottages. A fireplace of simple design, with oak lintel, rope moulding, and hearth of flagstones, heightens this effect. A colorful note is added by built-in book shelves and cabinets for music which reach from floor to ceiling at one end of the living room and are painted green.

On the second floor the walls and ceilings throughout are plastered with sand finished plaster. The doors and trims are fir stained walnut brown. The doors are batten with forged hinges and catches of simple design. There are two bathrooms with waxed linoleum floors, painted hard plaster wainscoats, and upper walls of varnished wallpaper in gay designs.

The roof is wood shingles laid with slightly broken lines and stained a gray green. It is insulated throughout.

The windows are all casements. The exterior woodwork is slate green for windows occurring in brick walls, cream white for dormer windows profiled against the roof, and brown strain for lintels and doors.

There is a spacious basement under the house with the exception of the garage. The entrance hall floor is of red brick and on a level with the garage floor which results naturally in two floor levels both downstairs and up.

The Architect

Mr. Bentley designed the house while he was a member of the firm of Bentley Taylor & Salisbury, and supervised its construction during the period of his independent practice.

Mr. Bentley lives at 337 Woodland road, Ravinia. He has found the field of small house design a most interesting one, and has studied the subject extensively, both in America and abroad.

Preparing for Big State Fair; Program of Events Aug. 17-24

Preparations for the Illinois State Fair, August 17 to 24, at Springfield, are moving forward in a manner which indicates that the 1929 exposition will surpass all previous shows in point of attendance, excellence of exhibits and in general attractions. Scores of workmen are busy on the grounds making repairs to buildings and putting the entire plant in the best shape in many years. Throughout the grounds a multiplicity of activities show results in added comforts and conveniences.

Fair officials have just announced that the automobile dealers of Illinois are back again as exhibitors after a number of years of absence. Practically every well known make of automobile will be on exhibit this year with several models being shown for each make.

The state fair premium list went into the mail this week. Former exhibitors, farm bureaus and other interested persons will be supplied as rapidly as the books can be mailed. The premium book lists a number of new departments which will be of general interest.

The schedule of special days is announced as follows:

Saturday, August 17—Automobile Race Day.

Sunday, August 18—Sacred Concert.

Monday, August 19—Children's Day.

Tuesday, August 20—Springfield Day.

Wednesday, August 21—Veterans' Day.

Thursday, August 22—Governor's Day.

Friday, August 23—Farm Bureau Day.

Saturday, August 24—Automobile Race Day.

Much is being said about the hard lot of the white collar men, but there are always flannel shirt jobs which can be had.

The schools that used to put in sheds for the pupils' bicycles, may soon need garages for their automobiles.
