American Indian Subject at Field Museum Today
The life of the American Indians will be made vivid in today's free entertainment of children at Field Museum of Natural History, under the provisions of the James Nelson and Anna Louise Raymond Fund.
The program will open with a story-hour at 10 a. m. "Mistanapish Visits His Blood-brother in the West," is the title of the story, which will be illustrated with colored stereopticon slides. Miss Margaret M.
Cornell, chief of the museum's Raymond division, will be the story-teller.
At 11 a. m. the children will be conducted on a tour of Indian halls illustrating the lives of armer, hunter and fisher Indians.
Children from all parts of the city and its suburbs are invited to attend.
If you can't afford a vacation you can cheer yourself considerably with the thought that if you raise the screens at home you will find that the flies bite just as hard as they do in the country.

plants nothing close to the road except stuff tourists can't eat.—Buffalo
