Group of Texans on Visit to North Shore

The progress and development of the Greater Chicago region and the north shore territory in particular was observed at first hand last week by a group of 50 prominent bankers, business men and farmers of Texas who were on an inspection tour of the Middle West.

Arriving at the Union Station, Chicago, from Waco, to Texans proceeded to the North Shore Line station at 223 S. Wabash avenue, where they boarded a North Shore Line train for Libertyville. They were accompanied by officials of the Public Service company of Northern Illinois, whose guests they were during the day.

At Libertyville station of the North Shore Line the party boarded Mari-gold motor coaches and proceeded on an inspection tour of the Hawthone Farm of Samuel Insull. Thence they went to the model farm of the Public Service company west of Mundelein. Following their inspection of the model farm, they took luncheon at the Countryside Golf club.

Now the Chicago butchers are serving pork chops and t-bone steaks done up in waxed paper. This is going to be a little tough on the curious housewife who likes to smell 'em before she buys.
