Fewer Autos Purchased by Installment Method During Past Year, Claim

The prevailing belief that a greater percentage of autoists are buying their cars on the installment plan is disproved by statistics furnished by finance companies, according to a survey of the American Motorists association, in conjunction with the Automobile club of Illinois.

"Credit sales of new cars last year were 10 per cent smaller than in 1926," the association declares. "In 1925, a total of 68.2 per cent of all new cars sold were bought on time payments, extending over periods of from six to eighteen months. Last year, reports of finance companies show, only 58.1 per cent of all new cars purchased were sold on the installment plan."

There has been a smaller decrease in the percentage of used cars purchased on the installment plan when 1928 figures are compared with those of 1925. Of all used cars sold in 1925, 62.8 per cent were bought on time payments, while last year 60.8 per cent were bought on time payments, or a decrease, during the four-year period, was only two per cent.

There were 3,220,000 new cars sold last year and of this number 1,870,000 were financed by different companies engaged in that business. Of the 3,760,000 used cars that changed hands during the same year, 2,258,000 were sold on the time payment plan.

Reports show that of the total number of new cars sold on time payments, 55,900 were repossessed for failure of purchasers to live up to their agreements. The average direct loss per repossessed car—the amount owing minus the amount received from sale—was $56 for automobiles sold on 12 or less equal monthly payments of $75 on cars sold on 13 to 18 equal monthly installments.

Herbs of Value for Drugs Grow on Farms

Valuable basic plants for the manufacture of drugs are growing on American farms but cannot be harvested at a profit because of European competition, according to Farm and Fireside. Were it not for whole families of Europeans working for small wages, the production of crude drugs might become a profitable adjunct to the farm, the magazine adds.

Calamus root, for example, grows plentifully in the United States, but for every pound gathered and sold by Americans, 1,000 pounds come from Europe. Catnip, which also might be harvested extensively, will not be bought by drug millers in lots of less than 100 pounds and it has to be cut, stripped and dried according to special rules that waste valuable time and cut into the market price of ten cents a pound.

Ginseng is also found abundantly in the United States but the cheap supply from abroad discourages its harvesting. Even the dreaded quack grass has a market value as a medicinal plant, but most of it also comes from Europe.
