Route 42 on Sheridan
Road Altered North of the New Bridges

Since the opening of the new North Sheridan road bridges the State Route 42 has been changed somewhat in that section. The route as now marked extends north from the north bridge on Sheridan to Edgecliff drive, thence one block west on Edgecliff to Oak street, a block north on Oak to Bloom and west on Bloom to Waukegan avenue and thence north through Highwood and past the guardhouse in Fort Sheridan, connecting with the original route just north of the main buildings in the fort.

The change is made, it was reported, because of a request from army headquarters to remove the traffic on this route from the center roadway through the fort. Also it is understood that the Highwood Chamber of Commerce was influential in having the route changed to go through Highwood.

Other Minor Blazes

The most serious fire in Highland Park in a long time occurred last Thursday evening, about 4:30, when sparks from a chimney ignited shingles on the roof of the Joseph Loesch residence, 388 Elm place. The roof was burned off and considerable damage was done to the interior before the flames were under control. The firemen worked hard and managed to avert total destruction of the building. The damage was estimated at about $2,000, according to the firemen's report.

Two minutes before the call to the Loesch place the firemen received another call to put out a grass fire at the barricade on East Laurel avenue, at the bluff. On October 18 they were called to 1416 Wildwood lane because of a broken coil in a gas heater, but no damage was reported. On October 19 there were two runs, one to put out a blaze in an Essex car and the other for a grass fire on Deerfield avenue.
