ELM PLACE SCHOOL NOTES

EIGHTH GRADES PORTRAY HISTORY

The 8A's of Elm Place school are very busy at their history charts, which are made on large white sheets of cardboard, and nicely illustrated.

Some of the girls are making costume charts, representing fashions through the ages, while a number of boys are working on the history of travel.

Since most boys are interested in aviation, the aeronautical charts are the most popular.

The pupils have been making great progress at their work. They hope to finish very soon.

The reason for making these representations is to show mainly the progress of aviation, travel, comparisons of yesterday and today, American history and costumes.

By Peter Moon.

ELM PLACE DEFEATS OAK TERRACE 13-0

Elm Place played Oak Terrace at the high school field on October 18. The game was fought hard all the way through. The score was 0-0 for three quarters, but then Elm Place scored two touchdowns, both of which were made by Dalla Valle on line plunges. The extra point was kicked by Herman Cucchiaro. Hugo Sonnenschein intercepted a pass and ran about fifty yards before he was tackled on the three-yard line. Both lines played well. The lineup was:

Pasquesi, end; Riddle, tackles; Tillman, guard; Skidmore, center; Carani, guard; Warren, tackle; Cucchiaro, end; Sonnenschein, half back; Ullman, half back; Dalla Valle, full back; Croke, quarter back.

PILGRIMS SEEN ON SAND TABLE

The sand boxes in the sixth grade rooms show two very interesting Pilgrim settlements. Miles Standish and his men are discussing town affairs. They are dressed in knee breeches, breast-plates, and helmets. John Alden is talking Priscilla under a tree. The figures are all dressed in appropriate costumes of that time. Acorns hollowed out make the pots which are hung over the open fire and small twigs are the trees which are many and well grouped. Guns on the south and east sides are being loaded and cleared. A cow is drinking at the lake and the boys are running around the cabin in an exciting game. All together the sand boxes make an interesting display.

SOAP AND HISTORY GO HAND IN HAND

The 5th and 6th graders of Elm Place have been doing some very fine soap sculpturing lately in connection with their history work. Norse ships and Greek architecture are the subjects of this interesting field of work. Parthenons, pillars and ships make a very attractive exhibit of the children's work.

THE BEST HALLOWE'EN

"What'll we do tonight? I'm tired of soaping windows every Halloween. Isn't there something else to do?" Bill asked Joe.

Over on the next block Mrs. H— was wondering what she could do to prevent her property from being destroyed. At last she had an idea. She hurried into the kitchen, and for the next hour she could have been seen hustling about her task.

That night Bill and Joe, armed with soap, started out to do their usual Halloween pranks. They decided to start at Mrs. H's house. As they neared the door, a pleasant voice greeted them.

"Come in, boys, I have a surprise for you," said Mrs. H. kindly. The boys were too surprised to refuse.

There before them was a table loaded with candy, doughnuts, popcorn, and everything that delights a boy. Many other boys called at the house that evening. Soap was left in Mrs. H's kitchen. Everybody left the house smiling. Needless to say, that was the only house in the neighborhood that went unscratched.

Moral:—Return good for evil before anyone gets a chance to do evil.

Roasted Apples

It was one fine morning and the odor of roasting apples came from the colonial room. If one had gone there, he would have found the kindergarten children sitting on the floor with their mouths watering as they saw the juice dripping from the roasting apples which hung on a string above the fireplace. They could hardly wait until the apples were done. After the apples were nice and brown, the children had an apple roast.

8A'S PLAN MOVIES

The Elm Place school 8A's are planning to give a series of movies to boost their class fund. These movies will be held in the Elm Place auditorium on Friday afternoon after school and on Friday evenings.

Each semester the 8A class raises a fund to present to the class as a gift when they graduate.

FINE WORK IN GREEN BAY ROAD SCHOOL

If the parents of the children in the Green Bay Road school should happen to visit there, they would find all the children busy at work, some making Indian pottery, some weaving rugs, and some writing poems, for we have some excellent poets in the third grade. In many rooms pumpkins which the children have made smile from the walls. A harmonica band has been organized in Miss Lynches room. The rhythm band played for the P. T. A. meeting last week and made a "big hit." The work in the Green Bay Road school is unusual and Elm Place is glad to be connected with such a school.
