

DEERFIELD-SHIELDS HIGH SCHOOL

"ROBERT OF SICILY" TO BE GIVEN FRIDAY

"He has exalted the lowly and put down the mighty from their seat"—might be classed as the quotation around which the action of the Christmas play, "Robert of Sicily," centers. The play will be presented this Friday in assembly. Parents and friends are cordially invited to attend.

For the most part, the cast remains the same as announced last week, with Kenneth Long taking the part of Robert, the Jester King; John Hubley-Robert, the Angel King; Charles Rogers, the Emperor; Bennett Goodman, Ambassador; John Snite, Pope; Richard Neff, Clerk; Edward Lowenstein, Sexton; Louise Gehr and Faith Foyer, Ladies, and Virginia Grant and Virginia Engles, Story Tellers.

There are also several corrections; in addition to Edward Hargraves, three other pages have been chosen. They are Hubert Lidicker, Artimus Ashurst, and Joseph Juccioni. Randall Roberts will have the part of "Carlton," and George Meyer will be "Winover." Court gentlemen will be Richard Dewey and Edward Klee. Guards and doorkeepers have not been selected as yet.

"Robert of Sicily" is an adaption of Longfellow's poem of that name. It is divided into four scenes. The first takes place in a church where Robert and his attendants are listening to the Magnificat. Robert believes that he alone is mighty, and upon hearing the Latin phrase, "He has exalted the lowly and put down the mighty from their seat," becomes very angry.

Scene two discloses the banners, rich materials, crowns sceptres and general gaiety of a court scene.

The second scene of this act shows the king in rags, asleep in the throne chair.

Scene one of the second act discloses the banners, rich materials, crowns, sceptres and general gaiety of a court scene. An angel king rules, and the jester finds it useless to convince members of the court that he is their king and not a mere fool. It is during this act that procession of ladies, gentlemen, and towns-people parade through the gates of the palace.

The last act is once more in the palace, on New Year's Eve. Robert repents and is restored to his throne.

Under the direction of Ellen Truax, the boys are busy with the collecting organs, gates, trumpets and other necessities of the court and church rooms.

Likewise the costume committee, with Nora Fink in charge, has had the job of seeing that the sixty students are in the proper dress of the day with long gowns, peaked hats, veils, plumes, tams, etc.

Other committees who are working on the pageant have as their chairmen Dorothy Scharle, make-up; John Horn, lighting; Tom Moore and Irma

LUNCHEON GIVEN IN HONOR OF DR. CLAUSEN TUESDAY

In honor of Dr. Clausen, a luncheon, which was attended by fourteen guests, was given by girls of the third period cooking class in the dining room of the apartment, in the industrial arts building, last Tuesday at noon.

The guests were: Mr. Sandwck, Dr. Clausen, Mrs. Raymond Flinn, Mrs. Pfanstiehl, Miss Buzard, Miss Wilson, Miss Comer, the Rev. W. F. Suhr, the Rev. Mark Andrews, the Rev. C. G. Unangst, Mr. Ball the Rev. Harvey Siemsen, the Rev. Allen Billman, and Mrs. Howell Murray.

Covers were laid for fourteen guests. Peggy Crawford, Mary Bennes, and Nellie Calkins served. The menu served was: chicken-a-la-king in puff paste shell, potato puff, buttered peas and rolls, olives, jelly, pineapple, cheese and nut salad, date nut meringue, cake, and coffee.

Luncheons are served by the cooking classes ever so often to give the students the experience in both preparing a meal and serving it. This luncheon was one of the ones given during the course for experience.

Following the luncheon the guests went over to the assembly where Dr. Clausen spoke before the student body.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS' BANQUET, JANUARY 10, 1930

The annual Mothers and Daughters' banquet is to be held on January 10, 1930.

The banquet, which is to be in the lunchroom at 6:30 p. m., will rival all the banquets of the past years. The dinner will cost sixty cents, and tickets are now on sale.

Virginia Engles is in charge of the banquet, and has chosen the following girls as committee chairmen:

Rena Nelson, entertainment; Virginia Grant, refreshments and decorations, Irma Salo, publicity agent; and Margaret Cox, hostess.

Good entertainment and a splendid dinner have been planned for this big event of the year given by the Girls' club. The girls assert that it will even rival the banquet given by the Boys' club.

Salo, designing; and Selma Cook, music.

Kenneth Hunter and Helen Hitchcock are assisting Miss Comer in the direction of the play. Virginia Engles is acting manager with William Ellis as her assistant.

Yes, Christmas is coming. Catch the spirit and boost "Robert of Sicily," this Friday, December 20.

BIG AIRPLANE TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD AFTER CHRISTMAS

All the model airplane enthusiasts will have a chance to demonstrate their skill in the coming model airplane tournament to be held after Christmas. This tournament, sponsored by the Shoreline, is open to anyone who builds his own models. Planes already constructed when purchased are ineligible, as is anyone who is not flying his own plane except by special permission of the high school model airplane club. Anyone, of any size can fly his plane, provided it is powered by a rubber motor.

Below are the contest rules. Any entrant-to-be who has any suggestions to make, should communicate with the Shoreline.

1. Senior R. O. G. Rise off ground).
 - a. Eight inch fuselage or less.
 - b. Must have landing gear.
2. Indoor endurance tractor planes.
 - a. Fifteen inch fuselage or less.
 - b. Landing gear not necessary.
3. Flying commercial planes.
 - a. Will be judged by flying ability.
4. Baby pusher type planes.
 - a. Pusher type.
 - b. Ten inch fuselage or less.
5. Freak and stunt division.

Any type of plane may enter provided it does not look like a common type of plane. Will be judged on flying ability and 'freakishness'.

Three prizes will be awarded in each division, and each first, second, and third will count so many points. The boy getting the most points will be given a ride in a Curtis Robin at Curtis field. This ride is being donated by Mr. C. Hunter, proprietor of Hunter's sport shop in Highland park.

In each of the six divisions, the contestant will be given three separate trials in order that he may get the best flight possible out of his plane. In case his plane cracks up, he may substitute another without being disqualified.

The contest judges have not all been selected as yet, but one of them is Mr. Einbecker. As nearly as can be decided, the tournament will be held a week from the Monday we come back to school.

CAGERS SCRIMMAGE WITH FT. SHERIDAN

In practice scrimmages with Ft. Sheridan's crack "D" company basketball team and the Lake Forest college team, our heavies showed up quite well last Wednesday and Thursday, especially in consideration of their lighter weight. The Deerfield team was scrappy and held its opponents to a pretty even score, although their defense was rather weak.

An interesting contrast was afforded the spectators at the Ft. Sheridan game—an contrast in style. The army players went tumbling down the floor in a careless mood, loose-jointed and yawning, and bumping into a Deerfield man every now and then. They dribbled high. Their shots were mostly loosed from the center of the floor or thereabouts—long, low shots with little arch—which looked as though their chances for going through the hoop were equivalent to the chances of a snowball in the nether regions. The peculiar part of the affair was that they did go through, and two points are two points, regardless of how they are made.

Show Good Form

The Deerfield-Shields artists, on the other hand, displayed superb form and took no chances on long shots. Their under-the-basket tries were numerous, whereas their long ones were conspicuous by their absence. And their passes were made more deliberately and thoughtfully than those of their careless army brethren.

Seyfarth made one or two bad passes but on the whole played his usual steady game. Thomas, the lanky one, worried the army with his "sucker" shots and would doubtless have worried the navy, the marine corps, and the National Guard, if they had been there. Jack needs only to put on a little weight to be a first-class basketeer.

Moon Gets Bump

Rogan, Berube, Segert, and Moon were scrappy. Moon got a bad bump once when he jumped for the tip-off from Thomas and an army man also jumped for the tip-off from Thomas, which coincidence caused the latter to land with considerable force upon Moon—on the floor. But the Moon rose and continued to shine.

Snite, Taylor, Hubley, and Ginter all played in the game and displayed their talent.

SUMMER SCHOOL TO BE EIGHT WEEKS IN LENGTH

That summer school will continue for eight weeks was decided at the board of education meeting held last Wednesday night. To have summer school six, eight, or twelve weeks to complete the course will be given for review only and not for credit.

After much discussion it was thought best to continue summer school for eight weeks as was done last year.
