Ever Talk to Your Wife About Your Will?

EVERY wife and mother is deeply interested in her own future welfare and in safeguards for her children. Talk your Will over with your wife and then with our Trust officer.

Your family cannot be sure of the financial protection promised by your present property unless you make your Will having your attorney put it in proper legal form. This is the only way that you can be sure your wishes and plans will be observed. To insure the proper carrying out of the provisions of your Will you should name a corporate executor. Probably a corporate Trustee will also enable you to extend your protection to your family more surely, practically and economically. You owe yourself and your family an investigation of the many concrete advantages offered in this important field by this institution. Our Trust officer will gladly explain them to you.
