LIBRARY

When wintry weather beckons you inside, plan a course of reading for a pastime. The Library will gladly help you.

Foundations

It is a matter of national concern that homes should function successfully. This short reading course is offered by the Bureau of Education, Washington, D.C., to individuals or to groups of parents for reading or study.

- 1. Living With Our Children, L. M. Gilbreth. A survey of home planning for the happiness of the family as a whole and for each member of it.
2. Feeding the Family, Mary Swartz Rose. Prepared for housewives not only that they may know what food values are and what food does for the body, but also that they may have at hand some information on the special food requirements of a typical family group.
3. The Psychological Care of Infant and Child, John B. Watson. It takes only a very short time to mar the personality of a young child. Parents need to know the danger signals for tantrums and a hundred other manifestations of mental disturbance in order to guide their children successfully.

The Happy Baby, L. R. Holt and others. That parents need more sound health education was the belief of Doctor Holt when he offered this book to supplement the knowledge which parents often possess but do not always use.

Permanent Play Materials for Young Children, C. G. Garrison. Many of the materials suggested in this book are as suitable for home use as for school. There are suggestions for the care and use of playthings, blocks, dolls, housekeeping toys, animals, picture books, pictures, etc.

Wholesome Childhood by Groves. The home is a miniature state. This book analyzes the reasons for success or failure of home life as manifested by the adjustments the child makes outside the home.

To grow is to outgrow.

Guilty?

July, 14, by Emil Ludwig. Written in 1921 but withheld from publication until a riper time, this volume now comes to a world totally disillusioned with regard to the late war, though still ignorant of much of the inside story of its genesis. Ludwig exposes it all.

Why Culture

The Meaning of Culture, by John Cowper Powys. Half of Mr. Powys' book is spent in analyzing culture and placing it in relation with philosophy, religion, the arts, and with man. The other half is spent in demonstrating the value of culture in everyday life, and herein is the book's value.

The Swan of Avon

Why Janet Should Read Shakespeare, Norman Hapgood. No lover of Shakespeare should forego the pleasure of reading this fresh, stimulating book on the great dramatist.

Higher Handicrafts

Linoform Block Printing, by Ernest

W. Watson. A book for the artist, student and amateur. Although too late for this year's Christmas cards, this will help you to make them for next year. Mr. Watson has illustrated his book with cuts and line drawings of the processes of block printing from the original drawing, cutting, to the actual printing of the block.

The Maker of Modern Europe

Richlieu, by Hilaire Belloc. Belloc's book is written to prove the thesis that Richlieu began what Bismarck finished; that is the division of Europe into various nations. Richlieu wanted to save France, and to do so opposed both Austria and Spain, either of whom could have united Europe, although perhaps only by conquest.

Sports

Art of Skating, by Irving Brokaw. Practical directions by diagrams and instantaneous photographs of skaters in action.

"My Favorite Amusement" is writing novels. My chief and most serious work in life is salmon fishing. . . . It is the one accomplishment about which I am really vain, and in the pursuit of which I am intolerant of competition. It leaves me cold that men should write better novels than mine. But I hate that man who can kill more fish."—Rafael Sabatini.

Prof. Obermeyer to Be Speaker at Meeting of North Shore Art League

Next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock Prof. Charles G. Obermeyer will be the guest speaker at the monthly meeting of the North Shore Art League. His subject is announced as "Art and Life. The Approach to Modern Aesthetics."

Professor Obermeyer, of the Chicago Art Institute staff, is internationally known for his interesting approach to art subjects, often thought of as "dry" by many people. His ability to hold his audience may be judged by an experience while lecturing at the University of South Africa. Large numbers of students often voluntarily gave up a Saturday holiday to walk two miles to his lectures.

This lecture by Professor Obermeyer, who earned his Ph. D. at the University of London, is open to the public. Tickets may be secured at the door of Matz hall, Winnetka Community house, on the evening of the lecture, or from Mrs. Gordon Wilson, 415 Ninth street, Wilmette.

Legion Popular in Paris

An American Legion social affair in Paris, France, always brings out more American veterans and their families than possibly can be accommodated, according to a recent letter from Sedley Peck, commander of Paris Post No. 1, who told of a typical Thanksgiving dinner, with American turkey, being limited to 299 persons.
