

OUR HOSPITAL IS ALIVE AND GROWING

changed. From being a place of horror and lamentation, it has become the center of cheerful health activities for the whole neighborhood. Dr. Emmet Keating says that the hospital whose chief product is surgical operations is failing in its duty to the community—and he is right! It should be (Our Hospital) a place where mothers can learn how to take care of their babies and keep them well, and where any of us can go, with our problems of healthful and rational living, to receive helpful suggestions.

All live things grow—first bigger and then better. Our Hospital is alive, because it is growing, in all sorts of ways. One of our privileges, as citizens of this locality, is to foster that growth.

Go and See
Have you been to see Our Hospital

(the Highland Park Hospital) lately? Or at all? If not, you'd better do so. You may get a delightful surprise.

Beautifully situated, in its own little park, with trees all around, it makes a quiet retreat for those who are ill (or just merely tired and in need of rest) where, under the ministrations of skillful hands, directed by kindly hearts and intelligent brains, one may come back again to health and peace.

Nor must one who enters there leave behind the wise and sympathetic attentions of one's own family doctor, to take a chance on finding an able medical attendant. Any physician in good standing is welcome to care for his patients there, just as if they were in their own homes—only with better facilities.

When we learn more about Our Hospital we will all be proud of it and glad that we live within the sphere of its beneficent influence.

REPORT ON INFANT WELFARE WORK HERE

have grown sufficiently, and have also contributed $25 to the baby clinic of the Highland Park hospital, which cares for Infant Welfare work in Highland Park.

"Our outstanding triumph has been the securing of one-fourth interest in our Highland Park Thrift shop, which since April has been maintained and operated by the Highland Park Hospital Auxiliary, the Northwestern Settlement and the Highland Park and Ravinia Infant Welfare center. These three organizations dictate the policy of and furnish workers for the shop, and each receives one-quarter of the proceeds, the fourth division going to a fund which is divided at the end of the year between other local charities. Besides giving our center a regular source of income, this project has established our center in our community as a permanent and vital institution and we look for increasingly fine results as the time goes on.

"We have this year been able to contribute to the work of Infant Welfare $2,650, which is almost double the amount we turned in last year. Feeling, as we do, very proud of our achievements (for we are still a young and struggling center) and yet very humble in the light of what other centers are accomplishing we can only strike a happy medium for the coming year and try to forge ahead with our heads high and our spirits courageous, but with our hands outstretched. Margaret N. Vail, president.

P. D. Armour's Report

At this annual meeting also a very interesting and comprehensive report of the year's activities of the society was made by the president, Philip D. Armour. He pointed out that the year was one of progress in many directions and in improvement in efficiency of the work.

During the year the society took care of 14,390 infants and pre-school children and of 1,390 expectant mothers, and that the staff made 106,118 home calls, the report showed. After briefly reviewing the several phases of the society's work during the year, the report showed that the total expenditure was $190,376.82, a sum slightly under the budget for 1929, and that while this was a splendid record, considering that all funds are received by voluntary subscription, the scope of the work is so great and the need so urgent that more and more each year there is necessity of increased finances to carry it on successfully. The report concludes with expression of appreciation for the cooperation of the staff and members and the good work done by the Women's Auxiliary.
