After all, neither a bank nor any other business can rise in service above the policies laid down by directors and the methods used by officers in executing those policies. Behind physical assets are men; final responsibility is theirs.

In this bank it is policy that the service rendered be given in a human and helpful manner. It is policy, too, that a progressive point of view be brought to the business and financial problems coming to us. In our opinion, none of these qualities precludes a fine and careful regard for sound banking practice and full protection of the funds entrusted to our care.

If this method of banking appeals to you, we hope you will pay us a call. Any of our officers will be glad to talk to you. Come in.
