Horse-and-Buggy School Laws in an Aeroplane Age Will Not Do for Our Children

A set of school laws that we have inherited from the horse-and-buggy era will not do for our children in the age of the aeroplane.

Few citizens probably realize that our children are attending schools that operate under laws that have not been changed since 1870. Laws that were passed when we were still recovering from the effects of the Civil War and before the great Chicago fire, are hard for an enlightened and thoroughly modern community to justify.

The education that our children receive at Elm Place, as R. Arthur Wood has so aptly said, is not merely the traditional three R's of the seventies (readin', writin' and 'rithmetic). Rather, it is a comparatively liberal education.
