"Protegee" Proves Artistic Performance

A highly artistic performance of Ostrovsky's "Protegee" was given at Ravinia last Sunday afternoon by the Chicago Art Theatre company. The garden of the James Cady Ewell residence with its newly built rustic studio, made a most appropriate and attractive setting for this Russian drama.

A cast of nine young men and women interpreted a wide variety of characters, from the high and mighty mistress to the crude and humble peasant child; from the withered and spiteful old widow of the blooming and innocent young girl; from the radiant lover to the groveling drunkard. Such marked individuality as the actors succeeded in giving to each and every role, lifted the whole production to a high plane of art seldom attained in modern dramatic performances.

Those taking part in the drama, were:

Ann Richards ..... The Protegee—Nadya
 Lorena May Cather ..... Liza
 Harold Hingston ..... Leonid
 Eri Hulbert ..... Potapych
 Betty Phillips ..... Vasilisa Peregrinova
 Agnes George ..... Madam Ulanbekov
 Harry Richardson ..... Grisha
 W. Lewis Gifford ..... Negligentov

The "show was full of laughs" but not as a result of the usual slap-stick comedy that is so often forced down (Continued on page 43)

Outdoor School Is Health Background

Many acres of sunshine next to our lake with a dozen and a half little sprites playing to their heart's content is a glorious sight to see. Highland Park is fortunate to possess such a background for health and pleasure, which the Open Air Nursery summer school located at 861 N. Sheridan road affords. From nine in the morning when the children arrive—some toddlers of two years old, others up to five or six, through the popular luncheon hour and the nap time, all outdoors. Drop around on tiptoe some time about two and see the mosquito tented cots in the sun or shade as the day suggests and see if your child is getting as much benefit from nature as these fortunate little people. Have you feeding problems or sleep problems? These can all be ironed out.
