Legion to Sponsor International Rifle Match This Summer

The first international rifle match in which World war veterans of the Allied nations will participate, will be sponsored this summer by the American Legion. Plans for the match were approved by the Legion's national executive committee at its recent meeting here and Frank J. Schneller of Neenah, Wis., national marksmanship director for the Legion, is making arrangements to get the competition under way by July 1.

First prize in the international shoot will be a trophy donated by the Ohio department of the Legion in memory of John R. McQuigg, past national commander, deceased. Definite assurance has been received from Fidac, the inter-allied veterans' association, that a large number of Allied veteran groups will organize teams and take part in the competition. The teams will be of ten men each and will use small bore .22 caliber arms shooting at 50 and 100 yard targets.

The teams will shoot at any time between July 1 and September 15 at their own convenience on home grounds. The National Rifle association will co-operate with the Legion in conducting the match and all entries are to be made through the N. R. A. Targets will be furnished by the association and are to be returned for grading. The rules for the match, as approved by the executive committee, provide that the shooting will be conducted under an official observer who may be a consular, naval or military officer of a nation other than the one whose firing is to be officially supervised.

The American Legion team to compete in the international shoot will be selected at the national small bore competition to be held at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August or September. Legionnaires with the highest scores will be chosen.

To File Record in Lake Zurich Case on July 8th, Is Report

The complete record in the injunction proceedings started against August Froelich, president of the village of Lake Zurich, and Mrs. Marguerite Pearce by cottage owners in Lake Zurich, will be turned over to Master-in-Chancery Ralph J. Dady July 8, it is reported.

All of the trial work will be completed on that day, including the checking of the record, which will be turned over to Mr. Dady for an opinion. His recommendations, which will be made within two weeks after he gets the records, will be turned over to Circuit Judge Edward Shurtleff for approval.

Attorney George McGaughey, counsel for Mr. Froelich, contends that the lake is privately owned because it is not a navigable stream. If this theory is upheld it will bar the cottage owners from the water except through the permission of the owners of the acreage in the lake.

Specimen of Rainbow Snake Is in Museum; Is Rare in the U. S.

Of course, there is no such thing as a hoopsnake, despite the fact that thousands of people will solemnly and sincerely insist that they have seen one.

There is, however, a very rare snake in the southeastern United States known as the rainbow snake, and it is one of those which people who believe in hoopsnakes will tell you they have seen grasp its tail in its mouth and go rolling along the countryside like a hoop. They will tell you also that it has a sting in its tail like a wasp.

An unusually fine specimen of the rainbow snake has just been received, alive, at Field Museum of Natural History. It is a beautifully colored creature, its skin containing most of the colors of the rainbow, arranged so as to form remarkable designs which should be an inspiration to an artist. The museum specimen is about four feet long.

The snake lives in swamps in the south, according to Karl P. Schmidt, herpetologist on the museum staff. It is harmless, and, of course, stingless, despite the hoopsnake story. The reason people may have associated it with a sting, says Mr. Schmidt, is that it makes exploring motions with its tail as if it did possess a sting. Both because of its own rarity, and because of the popular interest in the hoopsnake fable with which it has been associated, a specimen of the rainbow snake has long been sought for the museum's collections.

Denies Motion For New Trial in Road Condemnation Suit

Judgment for nearly $2,500 against the state highway department for the condemnation of land in Wauconda on which to construct state paving was ordered by Circuit Judge Edward Shurtleff last week when he denied a motion for a new trial in three condemnation cases.

Attorney George McGaughey perfected the record for an appeal and indicated that this course would be followed: Under the order Vernon D. Kimball was allowed $1,845; George Duberville $140; and M. J. Hughes $662.

These amounts were far less than the actual value of the property, according to attorneys for the Wauconda men. The motion for a new trial had been argued through two sessions of night court.

Assistant States Attorney S. H. Block and Corporation Counsel Arthur Bulkley appeared for the state.

Savings Deposits in Illinois Banks Grow

Saving deposits in Illinois banks have shown a steady increase each month since the first of the year, according to figures compiled by the Illinois Chamber of Commerce from true federal reserve figures on the 48 Illinois banks reporting. Savings deposits of the 48 banks as of May 1, 1930, totaled $411,974,901 as compared with $410,928,787 in April, $407,768,784 in March and $405,359,6634 in February.
